Who Is to Rule the U. S.?
Balfour and Kato, Able Men.
If We Scrap Our Defence.
And if War Comes, What Then?

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.

At this conference there are fifty things you want to describe first—the difference and resemblance between William Jennings Bryan and Srini Vasa Sastri, representing the British government of India.

The consciousness of power in Admiral Kato, thin, intelligent, 113-pound Japanese statesman, whose speech follows that of Balfour talking for the great British empire—the Frenchman Briand, cross between a viking and a farmer. His people bore the brunt of the war, and won it. He was almost crowded out of a seat at the high table.

But to Americans interested in their own form of government and its perpetuation there is only one thing important at the conference. It is: THE PLAN TO TAKE CONTROL OF OUR NAVY FROM THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES AND HAND IT TO THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH OR TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

Section 8 of the Constitution, defining the powers of Congress, says in Article Thirteen that Congress shall have power "to provide and maintain a navy." And Article Fourteen says that Congress shall have power "to make rules for the government and regulations of the land and naval forces."

The Constitution doesn't say that Mr. Hughes, or Mr. Harding or Japan or England shall have power to control the American navy, and stop its growth for ten years, or any period.

England and Japan are not bound by our Constitution, but Mr. Hughes and other Americans are. What are they doing, when they propose that which the Constitution forbids? They may plan to have this Congress ratify their decision to "junk" eight hundred million dollars' worth of American naval defence material, and mark time for ten years, to give nations out of breath a chance to catch up.

They can promise nothing for ten years unless they obtain from the people a constitutional amendment taking the right "to provide and maintain a navy" from Congress, elected by the people, and give it to Mr. Hughes, Admiral Kato and Arthur Balfour. If they try that change they will find some opposition. They are having a fine, picturesque time, talking about it, and making speeches at each other.

Arthur Balfour is speaking for England, after Mr. Hughes' announcement that committees will be appointed, meaning that the work of real deciding will be done secretly. Of course, it must be done secretly if at all. Public discussion would be simply public speaking for home consumption.

A dignified, noble figure is Arthur Balfour, rising as so many Englishmen have done, year after year, to speak for their great empire, and to work for its increasing greatness. Tall, quiet, white-haired, seventy-three years old, Balfour represents well-efficient, unselfish statesmanship.

Lord president of the Council now, formerly Secretary for Scotland, Chief Secretary for Ireland, Prime Minister, First Lord of the Admiralty, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs—England can give him nothing more. He is giving her everything, the last years of his life, the last of his vitality.

This writer, as correspondent for Charles A. Dana, in London, reported Balfour's appearance in the House as Secretary for Ireland, a good deal more than thirty years ago, when Tim Healy, Redmond, John Dillon and O'Brien fought him, and could not daunt him.

Time has changed him, softened him, as it has changed the Anglo-Irish situation. But, in the Continental Hall at Washington, the same as thirty-five years ago under the Irish Coercion Administrator, Balfour is fighting to get for England WHAT SHE WANTS.

Only once he hesitates, seeking a word. He knows exactly what he wants. England always does, and he knows how to make it sound as though it were what everybody OUGHT to want.

Referring to Secretary Hughes' proposal of no battleship building, Balfour says, "I am the first to take up the challenge, because of all powers here represented, the country I represent, as everybody knows, is the country most deeply interested in all naval questions."

Thus gently, he takes from Hughes and hands to Lloyd George at least the moral right to base the situation. Later he reads a cable from Lloyd George, praising us. He probably has other cables.

He says that November 12th when Hughes proposed his plan, will always be an anniversary remembered by him, "and I congratulate myself among the fortunate of the earth, in that I was present on that memorable occasion."

William Jennings Bryan, who once held the office held by Hughes, leans forward in the second row of reporters, and claps his hands together without making any noise. It's flattering to contrast Bryan and Balfour.

Balfour's education in statesmanship began when Elizabeth was Queen, and Balfour's relative Burly Burleigh, also "a Cecil," was her minister.

Bryan's education and statesmanship began the first time he ran for the Legislature in Nebraska. But Bryan is far more powerful personality. Give him four hundred years of thinking back of him, in the brains of his ancestors, and fifty years of real education and training in his own brain, such as Balfour has had, and he would be a very great man.

How cautiously, tactfully Balfour speaks. Thin ice does not dismay him, walking on eggs or red hot plough shares, for England, would not deter him. He remembers Englishmen that are to be the future empire, in Canada, Australia, India, Africa, and speaks of "the British Empire AND Great Britain," not Great Britain first, although that country is first, and ALL to him.

How gentle and inoffensive Balfour is, working with words, in that mixed, suspicious gathering, as carefully as any surgeon with his cool eye working with his steel. He will hurt nothing, shock no one, but will perform his operation.

For today Balfour confines himself to two things: First he makes clear the situation of the British Empire, scattered all over the world. Second he describes this country, "rich, unprecedented, self-sufficient—all its lines of communication protected, doubly protected from every conceivable hostile attack."

"Not merely one hundred and twenty million people, not merely the richest nation in the world (ten years ago England didn't expect to say that), but safe in its position, etc."

In other words, the United States is all right, doesn't need a big fleet. He doesn't exactly say it. He leaves you to say it; then asks you to consider Great Britain: "Suppose your Western States, for whose you are responsible, were suddenly removed ten thousand miles across the sea." Suppose you depended on oversea trade for food and raw materials?

"Suppose you never had more than seven weeks' good for your population?"

In other words, England must have the gigantic navy that you Americans do not need. Again he leaves you to say it.

In the rear, back of the big table, you can just see his face between Senator Lodge's right shoulder and Senator Underwood's left ear, sits Samuel Gompers.

He represents working men, and sits far in the rear. War is being discussed. The statesmen and fighting men are moved to the front. Statesmen, great ones of the earth, retire to the rear.

That's why we have so many wars. If the workmen stayed in the rear and made statesmen do the front line of fighting, it wouldn't take so many centuries to abolish war.

Balfour has shown you that the American geography makes a big American navy unnecessary. He has shown you that the geography of the British Empire makes a huge British navy inevitable.

Next comes smiling, scientific Japan, the view of submarines.

He objects, for England, to Mr. Hughes' submarine program. England will oppose one of the modern great submarines that are submersible battleships, with "ten thousand miles' radius," a dozen of them might wipe England's commercial fleet from the seas, and starve Great Britain. He doesn't say that, but does say that the small submarines are harmless, because they are intended for defence. You have them under your nose and send them out when fleets come to attack you; you don't send them far-off to attack others.

The great submarines are for attack. They could rise to the surface, bombard a city or a fleet, twenty-five miles away, then sink out of sight. They keep England awake, at night.

Lord Fischer, in his book that every American statesman should be compelled to read, gave England warning, before he died, of that greatest danger to the Empire, the submersible battleship. Balfour was echoing Fischer when he declared against giant submarines, that could start from a Japanese port, come up in the harbor of Liverpool or New York, do their work, release their flock of knocked-down flying machines, then sink and disappear again.

Ford Says He Is Willing to Buy Navies

WILL TURN WARSHIPS INTOPEACE TOOLS

Special Commission Drafts Plan to End Practices That Caused Disasters Here

By ALLAN A. BENSON,
Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

(Copyright, 1921, by the International News Service)

Detroit, Nov. 16.—Henry Ford today authorized me to make the following sensational announcement in his behalf:

"I will buy the navies of the world at junk prices," he said, "and turn them into agricultural machinery and automobiles if the United States and other powers will agree to disarm on the seas.

"You may tell those gentlemen in Washington that I mean business. They may think that I could not finance such an undertaking, but you may tell them that I can. You may assure them that with acetylene torches and electricity I can cut those warships to pieces and make useful things out of them."

Mr. Ford's announcement came as suddenly as did the world famed announcement of Secretary Hughes, with regard to the limitation of sea power. We were at his tractor plant at Dearborn talking of many things. In the course of the conversation, I asked him what he thought of the Hughes' proposal. He said it was all right except that it did not go far enough. He expressed the opinion that there should be complete disarmament on the sea. Then he authorized the announcement to buy all of the warships afloat.

AS RAW MATERIAL.

"To buy these ships," he continued, "would be only to get some of my raw material for a while from a new source. I am also a great user of all the while to get ore out of the ground and make into steel and I might just as well buy the metal in those warships as to buy metal anywhere else.

"I wish you would make it plain that I stand ready to buy, at junk prices, any and every warship that the United States and other powers may think of selling.

"Please ask them not to sink a ship. I understand that some of the captured German ships were sent to the bottom. It is a crime to sink metal like that. The world has need of it. So please state that, even though the powers should be willing only partly to disarm on the sea, I will buy whatever ships they may agree to withdraw from their navies.

"But they ought to scrap the whole lot. There is no reason why a warship should be left upon the oceans in the world. If these diplomats mean business they will accept my proposition and disarm. These diplomats say they want naval force only as a protection.

"Each one denies that he wants for purposes of aggression even the armament that the Hughes plan leaves each nation. Well, if that is the case, why should not all the governments and their ships be sent to me and make them into things that serve.

"I will make life better instead of worse.

"If the powers will sell me their navies, I will help them solve their unemployment problem. The unemployment problem is going to be worse even than the disarmament problem that Mr. Hughes proposes. If warship building is going to be stopped for ten years, thousands of men who are now working in steel mills and shipyards will be deprived of employment. Something should be done for these men. I will do something for them if the powers will sell me their warships. I will not only give employment to thousands more men in my tractor and automobile works, but indirectly, I will give employment to many thousands."

JAPAN.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Of all the national delegations assembled here in Washington, the most acutely scrutinized, the most discussed and probably the least understood is the Japanese. The limelight gravitates inwards it moves, one feels, not so much by an extreme respect as by an inordinate curiosity.

Of only one other people—I write as a spectator from overseas—does one feel the same sense of the possibility of dramatically unexpected things, and that is the Americans. The Japanese, we feel, we have not found out, and the Americans, we feel, have not found out themselves. Already the Americans have sprung one great surprise upon the conferences, Britain, France, Italy and the other powers in attendance and comparatively calculable—so far as their representation goes. But Japan is different. It is too big, unless the same lines, it follows different lines.

[illegible] for the supreme right to express reception at the Japanese headquarters. The ambassador is a buoyant man of the world, speaking excellent English and thoroughly acclimatized to an American press gathering. But many of the Japanese faces about him set up imaginative bugbears. One turns back into the voluminous robes and the sinister lodging of dusky swords, with which I had first met them long ago in Japanese prints, and which would have become them so much better. Admiral Kato spoke in Japanese and Prince Tokugawa in English they seemed the sufficient particulars. I got no conversation with any Japanese; they were not talking to us; they did not want to talk; it was a reception of hearty politeness and no exchanges. I found myself falling back upon an earlier impression.

Has Talk With Two Japanese Visitors

Some weeks ago I had a very illuminating talk in my garden at home with two Japanese visitors. Mr. Mashiko and Mr. Negoshi, who had come to discuss various educational ideas with me. They told me things that seem to me to be fundamentally important in this question.

"We build up our children," said Mr. Mashiko, "upon a diametrically different plan from yours. We turn them the other way round. Obedience and devotion are our leading thoughts. All our sentiment, all our stories and poetry, the traditions of centuries, teach loyalty, blind, unquestioning loyalty, of wife to husband, of men to the Lord, of everyone to the Monarch.

"The loyalty is religious. So far as political and social questions go, it is fundamental. But your training cultivates independence, free thought, the unsparing criticism of superiors, institutions, relationships. Perhaps it is better in the end and more invigorating; but it seems to us as wild and dangerous—we begin to have a sort of public opinion, but it is still difficult and timid."

Houlton, Me., Nov. 16.—Three persons have become lost and one death has resulted from the deep snow that has covered Aroostook County in the past few days.

Robert Kellog lost his way while hunting in the woods. In his wanderings one of his feet was caught in a root of a tree. Unable to free himself, he died from exposure.

Miss Verda Brewer, 17 years old, of Houlton, started on a fourteen-mile trip to Cary. She became lost. All night she wandered through the snow and in the morning was found in a raging party. She is in a serious condition at the Aroostook Hospital.

William Tozier of Blaine lost his way while hunting and was saved from death when he wantered into a lumber camp.

Drifts several feet high are reported throughout the county, and travel through the woods is dangerous, as all ordinary landmarks are wiped out by nature's white blanketing.

FILIPINO SENATORS GIVE IN TO GEN. WOOD

Manila, P. I., Nov. 16.—Differences between Governor-General Wood and the Philippine Senate were cleared when the Senate confirmed all of Wood's important appointments yesterday.

The Senate at a caucus decided to remain firm in its refusal to confirm a number of appointments. Senators charged General Wood had not consulted them, a right they claimed under the Jones law. The Senators declared other persons in the Philippine Islands were better fitted for the posts than those named by Wood.

NOT GUILTY PLEA MADE TO IRWIN

Certain Technical Rights Are Reserved by Attorney-General at Arraignment

Attorney-General J. Weston Allen, indicted yesterday by the Suffolk County Grand Jury on a charge of larceny from a client, was arraigned before Judge Irwin in Superior Criminal Court today and entered a plea of "Not Guilty."

He was permitted to have the plea entered, "with right to file pleas reserved," thus conserving certain technical rights.

Attorney-General Allen appeared an hour before he had agreed, and was accompanied by former Attorney-General Herbert Parker, his counsel, and Assistant Attorney-General Albert Hurwitz.

A routine criminal case was interrupted to give the attorney-general a chance to plead.

Attorney Parker at first asked permission to enter a plea of "not guilty," with the privilege of withdrawing it later, in case he wished to make a motion regarding the indictment.

NO DATE FOR TRIAL.

It developed that this motion was made with the idea that the indictment might be faulty and the Attorney-General might not have to plead at all, but Judge Irwin refused the motion, saying there was no precedent for such a ruling.

No date was set for Allen's trial. He and his counsel and a personal friend left the courtroom in a confident mood and, as he passed along, he was overheard to say, "We're safe," evidently having anticipated some trouble in arranging his affairs so as not to conflict with his conduct of his office.

Attorney W. Edwin Ulmer, who was indicted along with Allen and Justice Edward C. Pierce of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, and who is charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice and with getting control of shares of stock so as to prevent their owners from benefiting from them, then appeared.

Ulmer gave bonds in $1,000 for his appearance when wanted. No date for his trial was set.

There was no indication as to when papers would be served on Judge Pierce, who is ill in his home in Brookline.

Speaking for her husband, who is very ill at his Brookline home, Mrs. Pierce told reporters that "It's all politics. This is all there is to it. He will be all over after the election.

"Judge Pierce is very sick with an attack of gallstones and infection. We are making preparations for an operation just as soon as he is able to undergo one."

Judge Pierce is indicted jointly with Ulmer on two counts. The first charges the two men conspired to prevent heirs of the late Edmund M. Wood from obtaining control of stock, and the second that Judge Pierce and the lawyer plotted to circumvent the course of justice by indicting Charles S. Hill, a Brookline attorney and master in two suits in equity, to file a report contrary to the facts as found by Hill.

Reports of the indictments, which were secret, may be said literally to have shaken the legal profession to its foundations.

The cases were presented to the Grand Jury by Assistant District Attorney David Mancevitz, and shortly after the indictments were returned Ulmer was arrested by Sergeant Carey of the district attorney's office.

Sergeant Carey, under directions from District Attorney Pelletier, went to the State House and informed Attorney-General Allen that he had been indicted by the Grand Jury on a charge of the larceny of $151 from a client about four years ago. Carey found Allen at his office in the State House and read a copy of the indictment to him.

ACCUSED OF TAKING GRATUITIES.

Judge Pierce and Attorney Ulmer were indicted following lengthy John Doe proceedings which arose from charges made in connection with litigation between the Waban Rose Conservatory and the Henry A. Wood Seed Company, both of Wellesley.

The Supreme Court justice, who has been hearing the disbarment proceedings against Daniel H. Coakley, Daniel V. McIsaac and William J. Corcoran, was accused in two counts of conspiring with Ulmer to obstruct the administration of justice and receiving gratuities.

The attorney-general was indicted on a charge of larceny from a woman client. Attorney-General Allen, as chief prosecuting officer of the Commonwealth, has demanded the removal from office and disbarment of Pelletier on the charge that the district attorney is unfit.

ALLEN CHARGED WITH LARCENY.

The entire proceedings were shrouded in much secrecy, although rumors had been current for some days that a Supreme Court justice was being investigated. It was not until Ulmer was brought into the district attorney's office, however, that any statement was made.

Before the Retail Merchants' Association at Young's Hotel, Attorney-General Allen discussing the indictment in a voice vibrant with emotion, defiantly declared he had just begun to fight.

"Sometimes I have wished and felt that I had some Irish in me," he declared. "One of my opponents has dubbed me the fighting attorney-general. My answer to him is that I have just begun to fight.

ON FIRING LINE.

"This is the first meal I have eaten as an indicted man. Brother and opponent, I am on the firing line and a man on the firing line has not time to talk, but I want to say that the man or woman who is descended from the Mayflower and does not know the glory of his inheritance is not worthy of it. It is the glory of persecution. It makes him the kin of her of every persecuted race, of every persecuted people.

"The appeal to religious or race prejudice is a menace to our institutions and anyone who raises it is striking a blow at you and me and at all who love this land.

"During the past year I have had to show perhaps more than any of my predecessors, forbearance, patience and fortitude, but only because there is a greater opportunity for service in these later days.

"Friends, no one would assume the responsibility for public service if it was not for the oath of office. I would not undertake what I have undertaken if I had not sworn to undertake it in my oath of office. It is my duty to maintain the law equally in all counties and the law shall be maintained because it is essential to the life and existence of our republic.

"There can be no law for the poor man different from the rich man," he continued. "It must not be that the rich man can buy immunity if he is guilty or be subjected to blackmail."

Allen was indicted in three counts. One count charges him with larceny of $153.49 from Nellie T. Beck, now the wife of Charles H. Olsen, an officer on one of the Nantasket boats. The alleged larceny occurred August 18, 1917.

CHECK FOR $153.49.

The second count charges him with the larceny of a check for that amount made payable to Nellie T. Beck.

The third count charges him with the larceny of $21.39, the property of Nellie T. Beck.

The subject matter of the indictment was called to the attention of District Attorney Pelletier and he summoned to appear before the Grand Jury all parties having any knowledge of the matter, including Mrs. Olsen.

It is alleged that in the settlement of an estate Edward C. Beck, a brother of Nellie T. Beck, sent a check payable to her for $153.49. The check was dated August 8, 1917. Miss Beck, it is alleged, failed to receive the check. She got into communication with her brother, who convinced her that he had sent the check by showing to her the check which he had received back from his bank.

The check, it is charged, bore the endorsement of "Nellie T. Beck, by J. Weston Allen, Attorney." Miss Beck said she never authorized Allen to endorse her name to the check.

ASKED FOR HER MONEY.

It was deposited on August 30 in the Puritan Trust Company to the credit of J. Weston Allen, who had a small account there. At the time the check was deposited the account of Allen showed a balance of $135, it is said. Shortly afterwards the account was reduced, it is said, to $91.

When Miss Beck learned from her brother that Allen had received the check she spoke to Allen about it. He told her, it is charged, that he had received a check for $134, but afterwards admitted that he had received $153.49. She asked him for the money, it is alleged, and it is reported he told her that he would let her have $50 on account. She requested $75 as she was in need of money. So he is said to have given her that amount as the first payment.

She is said to have made other requests upon Mr. Allen for the balance, having been in poor circumstances. On one occasion when she asked him for some money, it is charged he told her to go to work or to let some rooms.

ALLEN BROUGHT SUIT.

In various payments, it is said, he finally paid her the sum of $134 and her efforts to get the balance of $21.49 were unavailing. After she had received $134, it is understood, Allen brought suit against her on a bill for services which she disputed as she claimed he was to work on a ten per cent. basis.

The account of Allen from August, 1916, to 1918, was presented to the grand jury.

In the case against Judge Pierce and Attorney Ulmer, in one count, it is charged, they conspired to prevent Mary E. Hand, Henry Wood and Blanche A. Leger, the three children and heirs of Edmund M. Wood, from securing to themselves certain stock of the Waban Rose Conservatories and the Henry Wood's Sons Co., to which they were lawfully entitled, and further, that the defendant Ulmer should fraudulently and unlawfully procure and become possessed of and vested with the unrestricted voting power and the whole right, title and interest, to the stock or a majority of it, and all the other property of the companies, and manage and control the companies for his own use and benefit and not for the use and benefit of the heirs of Edmund M. Wood.

ALLEGED ACTION IN SUITS.

The second count charges that they conspired to obstruct the due administration of justice by causing, procuring and inducing Charles S. Hill, as special master in two suits in equity in which the three heirs and Ulmer were parties, to file with the Supreme Court a report and findings contrary to the facts as found by Hill.

The Grand Jury of which Jeremiah Desmond, professionally identified with the Good Government Association, is foreman, after deliberation voted an indictment in two counts.

It is understood that the investigation by the District Attorney's office disclosed that employes of the Waban Rose Conservatories under instructions from Ulmer, who was in full control of the business, delivered orders of three dozen roses at least once a week and for some time twice a week and occasionally three times a week, at the home of Judge Pierce in Brookline. No cost charges are said to have been made.

It is also charged that wood was sent from the Henry Wood's Sons Company to the home of the judge.

These alleged gratuities aggregated approximately $2,000 in value.

Several of the employees had been with the two concerns for a great many years.

Some complaint was made to Ulmer about his giving away property of the companies to the judge, and he is quoted as having replied that it was a good investment and that when they needed a friend in the Supreme Court the flowers and other things sent to the judge would be the best possible investment.

One of the heirs was termed a fool by Ulmer, it is said, because of his objection. One of the heirs did not get another attorney for a long time because he said he had been afraid of offending Judge Pierce.

One of the daughters of Edmund M. Wood became disturbed over conditions and employed a lawyer. Before Judge Pierce in the lobby of the Supreme Court the Judge advised her, it is claimed, not to get other counsel, but to stick to Ulmer. She went to Ulmer's offices where she drafted a letter discharging the attorney she had employed, and mailed it to him. The daughter is said to have been frightened and in a nervous state at the time.

ATTORNEYS WITHDREW.

It is said that evidence was obtained tending to show that two attorneys made known to Judge Pierce a purpose to bring proceedings against Ulmer and that the judge in substance bluntly informed them they would not get very far with any action against Ulmer in the Supreme Court, and that while he was not a member of the Superior Court, he did not think they would be very successful there.

The attorneys withdrew from the case and subsequently two other lawyers became counsel.

The most startling charge relates to the alleged influence exerted by Judge Pierce over Charles S. Hill, master in the equity suits, brought in the interests of the three heirs, against Ulmer by George M. Poland and Lorry P. Jordan, as counsel.

It is claimed that Hill prepared a draft report after extended hearings and sent it to counsel in accordance with the practice so that the attorneys would have the opportunity to file any objection to it within five days.

It is claimed that Ulmer, upon receipt of the report which was adverse to him and contained damaging statements, hurried with it to Judge Pierce and the latter sent for Hill.

It is said that the master was told by the judge that he had crucified Ulmer in his report and after the interview with the judge the master re-drafted his report and completely changed his findings in respect to Ulmer, eliminating the damaging statements, and filed it as his final report in the Supreme Judicial Court.

FRANK G. ALLEN IS ACCUSED OF FRAUD

Willett Charges President of Senate Took Advantage of His Financial Reverses

President Frank G. Allen of the Massachusetts State Senate and other trustees of the Norwood Housing Association, were accused of fraud in a bill in equity filed today in Supreme Court by George F. Willett of Norwood and Boston, whose spectacular financial crash in 1918 startled banking men throughout the East.

Willett, who created the Norwood Housing Association to the days when he was a power in the world of money, asked the appointment of a receiver.

He declared that Allen and the others had taken advantage of his financial reverses to betray his interests and to get possession of stock by ways that were all the more reprehensible by reason of the fact that Allen is his relative.

$15,000,000 SUIT.

At the same time this bill was filed echoes of Willett's famous $15,000,000 suit against the men he says conspired to bring about his downfall were reverberating through the chambers of the Supreme Court, where arguments were being heard in the case by the full bench.

Willett and Willett, Sears & Company, which is mostly Willett, advising Robert F Herrick, Daniel G. Wing of the First National Bank, F. S. Moseley & Company, Kidder, Peabody & Company, and the Chase National Bank of New York.

He charges the defendant concerns conspired to deprive him of profitable business and obtain them for themselves.

The defendants have fought in the Superior Court on demurrers, and have lost, and today's arguments were on the appeal taken by the defendants from that Superior Court ruling.

WORTH $10,000,000.

Counsel for Willett, who lives in Norwood, a town he greatly benefited in the days when he was a financial power, argued that in 1918 he and his company controlled twenty-six corporations and owned the major portions of the stock in them.

Two of these concerns, the American Felt Company and the Daniel Green Felt Shoe Company, were earning $1,000,000 a year, counsel continued, and were worth $10,000,000 to Willett.

Continuing, he declared the defendants, or some of them, conspired to deprive him of the businesses he had created, and likewise prevented him from obtaining a $2,000,000 loan from the Chase National Bank of New York upon such a loan he would have tided him over the financial reverses which had beset him and finally encompassed his downfall as a money power.

Landru denied, however, that he had killed the woman. Mme. Buisson is Landru's eighth alleged victim and it was under severe cross examination regarding her disappearance that he admitted the fraud perpetrated on the woman.

"I induced my real wife to pose as Mme. Buisson after her disappearance," said the prisoner, "in order to cash the bonds I took from her; but," said Landru, raising his hands dramatically toward heaven, "my wife is innocent of any wrong doing.

"Whatever she did was done only as my tool and for love of me."

The prosecution declared Landru made this admission in order to save his wife, who is under indictment charged with fraud. It was the disappearance of Mme. Buisson that finally brought Landru's arrest eighteen months later, when the victim's sister tracked Landru down.

Landru today appeared fatigued. He was feverish-eyed and he raised his right hand in protest, murmuring:

"It is all untrue. I am ignorant of Mme. Buisson's whereabouts. I sent her son and niece money to keep them from poverty."

LANDRU ADMITS VICTIMIZING ONE WIFE

"Bluebeard", Confesses Defrauding Mme. Buisson to Save True Wife From Prison

By International News Service.

Versailles, Nov. 16.—Admitting for the first time that he had "victimized" one of the ten women whom he is accused of murdering, Henri Landru, the alleged Bluebeard, today confessed to the court he had robbed Mme. Buisson, a widow, of $2,000.

Landru denied, however, that he had killed the woman. Mme. Buisson is Landru's eighth alleged victim and it was under severe cross examination regarding her disappearance that he admitted the fraud perpetrated on the woman.

"I induced my real wife to pose as Mme. Buisson after her disappearance," said the prisoner, "in order to cash the bonds I took from her; but," said Landru, raising his hands dramatically toward heaven, "my wife is innocent of any wrong doing.

WIFE TESTIFIES SHE CHASED 'RIVAL' WHO INVADED HER HOME

DEFENDS MAN SUED BY NURSE

Mrs. Edith McKay, wife of the Boston & Maine locomotive engineer who is the "hero" if the breach of promise melodrama being staged in the Cambridge Superior Court, took the stand and the leading role today.

And while she testified in behalf of the man who admitted under oath to having broken his promises, Mrs. Katherine T. Beaman, handsome trained nurse of Malden, who is suing Chalas Frederick McKay for $5,000, sat near by, flushed and uneasy.

Mrs. McKay is a large woman, with a sweet face and a soft, well-modulated voice. Under the guidance of McKay's attorney, she told her side of the story of the relations between her six-foot, broad-shouldered husband and the attractive-looking nurse.

When she had finished, both sides rested, for McKay already had been on the stand and told of nights spent in company with Mrs. Beaman in hotels and his cottage at Ipswich.

"CALLED SIX TIMES."

"We were married in 1912," began Mrs. McKay, "and were very happy until I came back from a visit in Canada in the Fall of 1918. Soon after my return this woman," motioning with a large, well-formed hand toward the plaintiff sitting near by, "got on the telephone one day and called my husband at least six times.

"I was suspicious, and became more so when the following morning she arrived at my home about nine in the morning and spent the rest of the day until after three o'clock in the sitting room.

"She insisted that she wanted to see Mr. McKay and would not tell me what the matter was about. When Char—Mr. McKay—came in I confronted them and demanded to know the trouble. This woman said that she wanted my husband to go to the house of a friend and apologize for having been rude over the telephone.

"That sounded foolish to me after what had already happened, so I faced her, saying: 'Look here. This is my house and I value everything in it. What are you trying to do turn it upside down?'

"Then she started to run and I chased her and we both fell over the rug in the hallway. After that I called in to the police, but she had gone before they got there.

MET AT STATION.

"Later I heard my husband make an appointment to meet this woman at the Malden railroad station and went there myself. This woman berated me and called me a nasty, jealous beast, and other names. I appealed to a police officer who aided Mr. McKay which of us two women was his wife, and when he pointed to me, the officer said: 'Then you take her home,' and turning to this woman, told her to 'get out of here quick.'

Passionate love letters formed one of the startling features of the second day of the trial.

One of the letters read said:

"Hello, Charlie, darling. I'm sure am quiet for a while. Call me up whenever you feel like it. I'm always free to do anything I want. Single Bliss."

Attorney H. R. Bygrave, who was conducting the cross-examination, asked for an explanation of this signature, but Mrs. Beaman declared that she could not say. Being pressed she snapped:

"It don't mean anything."

The attorney then switched to another point of attack and wanted to know whether that letter was intended to "coax" McKay to come back to her.

"It was not," said the witness.

Later another letter, written it was testified, following the break between the locomotive engineer and the nurse, was read to the jury. It ran:

"MY DARLING CHARLIE."

"My dear darling Charlie—I hold in my heart the same fond love for you as always. All has ended, but real love never loses. I wish I was with you tonight, but I shall be with you in spirit. Love and kisses and all best wishes from: Your Babe."

"Babe," she explained in reply to the attorney's questions, was the "love name" McKay had given her.

Mrs. Beaman became deadly white and angry when Attorney Bygrave asked if this letter was not an attempt on her part to "complete the wreckage of Mrs. McKay's home."

"It most certainly was not," said the witness.

Then, after a couple of minor witnesses had been called and fgiished their testimony, McKay, himself, took the stand.

McKAY TELLS HIS STORY.

He said he was an engineer for the B. & M. road, living on No. 31 Thurston street, Somerville, and then, under the leadership of his counsel, proceeded to tell the story of his relations with Mrs. Beaman, who sat nearby, flushing and palling by turns as the tale went on.

It was in the Summer of 1918, the locomotive driver said, that he first met Mrs. Beaman in the flat of a nearby neighbor. His wife, he added, was spending the time in the family cottage at Ipswich.

A TRIP TO IPSWICH.

After that the intimacy between the nurse and the engineer grew rapidly, he testified. They went on a number of parties and at last to one in Chinatown, after which they went to Ipswich, where they spent the night in McKay's cottage, his wife in the meantime having gone to pay a visit to friends in Canada. He said they were alone in the cottage all night, and afterward arranged for many similar parties, and for meetings at different Boston hotels, where they registered as man and wife. He said he had always used his own name.

He denied flatly that he had ever asked her to marry him.

Then, he said, his wife wrote that she was coming home from Canada and he told Mrs. Beaman that they would have "to break this thing off short."

According to his testimony she agreed and gave him back many of his letters.

FATE OF FATTY MAY BE SWAYED BY WOMEN

Five Now in Jury Box as Actus Trial of Famous Comedian Gets Under Way

By International News Service.

San Francisco, Nov. 16.—Will women, who have figured so largely in producing the situation in which Roscoe C. ("Fatty") Arbuckle now finds himself, cast the deciding vote in determining his guilt or innocence of the charge of manslaughter?

This will be determined today.

Five of the eleven tentative jurors in the box when court convened for the third day of the film comedian's trial were women.

The death of a woman, Virginia Rappe, resulted in the charge being brought against the heavyweight funster of the screen.

It was a woman, Mrs. Bambina Maude Delmont, who swore in the original complaint of murder.

And Fate hovering over the whirling Jury wheel, decreed that the names of five of thirteen women in the jury panel of sixty-five should be drawn first.

The twelfth tentative juror will be chosen soon after court convenes today. Then the defense must decide whether the five women in the box are to sit in judgment on Arbuckle's case.

They may be removed from the box by exercise of the peremptory challenges allowed by the law. The defence has savagely attacked the activities of the Woman's Vigilance Committee, in connection with the case, but all of the women jurors have denied that they would permit the interest of this committee in the case to sway their judgment.

"I don't care whether they are men or women," Arbuckle said today. "Just so they give me a fair trial."

Speedier procedure was in prospect under the adjurations of Judge Harold Louderback, who told counsel that they long-winded questions to jurors had led him to the belief they were putting in their arguments prior to the opening of the trial.

COPLEY-PLAZA IS RUN FOR DAY BY WOMEN

Take Complete Charge in Drive to Aid Drive for Red Cross

By HAZEL CANNING.

Woman's Day at the Copley-Plaza. The day of Mine Hostess Madame Pierson Birrett and many young Miss Chestnut Hill.

Today, when ordinary Simeon Strauss of Milwaukee stopped in his cab at the Copley-Plaza Mrs. George Mumford, perhaps, or Mrs. P. M Saltonstall, or Miss Mary Sawyer, or Lavinia Newell sprang to open the door and help Simeon alight.

Simeon, just out of the West, clung to his bag. He looked at the cream of Beacon street with a little suspicion.

"Is this a new kind of gold brick?" asked Simeon of Reuben Strauss, his brother, still hesitating on the taxi's step, "or have they pulled out the lady militia in Boston."

Plainly Simeon was from the West. You might almost have said he had come from Missouri if Milwaukee had not been plainly printed on his bag.

"NO GOLD BRICK."

"Is this a new kind of——"

"No gold brick," said Miss Newell, one of the New England managers of the Red Cross, "just merely woman's day at the Copley-Plaza."

Simeon took a step ahead. Miss Newell grasping his bag as though born to the job of grasping bags Reuben cautiously felt his way to the swinging front doors.

As they reached the opening, Simeon felt in his pocket. Then he brought out five cents and gave it to the doorwoman.

Miss Newell took it for the Frances D. Willard Settlement Fund. Inside, Simeon and Reuben found such a state of affairs as they never found in Oshkosh, when they stopped off on that growing Western community to explain the work of the excellent oil stock they were travelling to promote.

Simeon looked as if he would like to be pleased, but was deterred by not being quite sure how much it was going to cost him.

"CHINESE" CHECK GIRLS.

At the main stand, where coats are checked, he lingered a minute, admiring the "Chinese" check room girls in their Oriental pantaliettes. A girl in Turkish trousers fitted by just ahead, in uniform of horizon blue with trimmings of scarlet. Fred W. Stanley Yarker captained a score of bell boys.

"Say," murmured Simeon to his brother Reuben, "are you glad you came to this here hotel or are you sorry. Seems to me I heard they was extra conservative in Boston."

Reuben looked and grunted. "Huh," said he, "you must have got this city mixed up with something else."

Simeon and his brother passed up to the deck, a little disturbed by the Chinese sign which read, "Translated —Tips accepted." This, as patrician little fingers stretched out after that dollar bill, from which no change came back, for ten cent checking service.

Everywhere the buzz of a hotel, managed, bell-boyed, clerked by women. Then suddenly came the voice of the fat man who looked like a miser, but always comes to the Copley-Plaza when in Boston, rose, in accents of ominous dignity.

"If it's all the same to you I'd prefer a boy."

This came from a startled old Virginian, as Mrs. Samuel S. Stevens was signalling for a saucy little bell boy from the bench, to pilot the fluffy old gentleman to his room on the fifth floor.

The old gentleman handed his bag to one of the two or three able bodied porters, still lingering about the heaviest labor. "Here George," said the stuffy old man, adding an explanation, "you take that bag."

At the newsstand, Mrs. Francis Drey was selling an ordinary 5-cent paper for a two-dollar bill, while Mrs. Charles A. Clark, in the stock room, was writing New York stock quotations on the black board, where business men read the figures and put orders over her telephone.

The Braggiotti sisters danced, while Mrs. Oliver Ames, Jr., sold flowers from the bouquet given them at the end. Just beyond, under the eyes of Miss Isabella Mumford and Miss Louise Peasedee, trays came and went, laden with luncheons.

Court Orders Man to Buy North End Boys New Football

The Hillside football team, composed of North End Italian boys averaging ten or eleven years old, will play a scheduled game next Saturday as the result of the good offices of Patrolman Jerry Martin of Station 1 and Judge Sheehan of Municipal Court.

The team's only football was seized by Francisco Mallo, of No. 21 Salem street from the arm of one of the players. Mallo then destroyed it. The boys told Patrolman Martin, who had Mallo brought into court on a charge of malicious destruction of property.

Judge Sheehan ordered Mallo to pay the boys for another ball, and two of the lads went into the clerk's office forward and collected 60 cents each for witness fees.

CRIMINALS GET CIVIL SERVICE POSITIONS

Crimes Probably Due to Failure to Investigate, Says Chairman Bartlett

By The Associated Press.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 16—Insufficient appropriations to enable the Civil Service Commission to investigate moral character and record of persons certified for government is "probably responsible for even criminality and dishonesty" in the service, John H. Bartlett, Chairman of the Commission, declared in an address here today before the convention of the National Civil Service Reform League.

"On account of insufficient funds with which to man the undertaking," Mr. Bartlett told the convention, "the civil service commission is annually examining over 300,000 applicants for federal positions, and certifying those who attain a scholastic rating of 70 per cent. and over, without making an examination or investigation of their moral character. Criminal record, habits, reputation, industry, faithfulness, worthiness, veracity or loyalty.

"The 'rating,' the thing which determines their relative positions on the eligible register, does not take into account good character, indifferent character, or bad character, but is wholly and purely scholastic."

Referring to what he described as the "recent shocking disclosures of criminality in the city of Washington where at this time a policeman is held for the theft of an automobile," Mr. Bartlett declared the commission had determined on scrutiny of this although there was no provision for it, to make character investigations of applicants for the Washington police force.

The 597,0000 employes of the federal government are the "very protectors of our laws and the guardians of our property," the speaker asserted, yet, with the recent exception of postmasters, they are certified with for service without regard to their character or moral record."

The quality of these Federal employes, he added, "absolutely determines the quality of our government."

Although the postal service was rapidly improving, Mr. Barrett said, "hundreds of thousands worth of mail is stolen annually and many believe that much may be laid at the doors of the employes."

INSURANCE AGAINST UNEMPLOYMENT URGED

Rev. A. J. Muste, former pastor of a Congregational Church in Newton, now in charge of a Workers' College at Katonah, N. Y., told Episcopal ministers today of the need of urging unemployment insurance to be provided by the State or by agreement between employers and workers.

TOO MUCH T. N. T. IN FARRAR ROW, SAYS LAWYER

Contradicts "Oxygen" Statement of Dr. Smith and Lays Trouble to Gerry's Poetry

Not too much oxygen, but too much T N T in the Tellegen-Farrar family, was to blame for all the mixups, according to Harry N. Steinfelt, attorney for Tellegen, according to word from New York.

Steinfelt contradicts the opinion given by Dr. G. Kendrick Smith that Tellegen was too oxygenic in his make-up to marry the also oxygenic Farrar.

"Not too much oxygen, but too much T N T," Steinfelt asserts, caused the row. The charge of cruelty which Tellegen brings against his wife are not so much physical violence, his lawyer declares, as spiritual and even poetical.

According to Steinfelt, Farrar scratched and slapped her husband, but he minded, far more, the abrupt awakenings by his wife, in the cold hours of the night, when he was expected to applaud various hectic poems written by her.

EFFUSIVE POETRY.

Tellegen, his lawyer says, although literary, preferred to do his stunt at poetical appreciation earlier in the evening. To be awakened from a sound sleep, even to applaud poems extolling his own beauty, says the actor through his attorneys, became too much of a good thing.

The poems, it is alleged, were more in the style of gushing effusions of the old Greek poetess Sappho than any polite concoction of Mrs. Browning of respectable Victorian days.

Tellegen was not unfaithful to his wife in every State in the Union, say his attorneys. "There are absolutely no grounds for Miss Farrar's charges," they claim. "De will insist that they be dismissed."

Then they fire another shot into the Farrar camp by stating that inquiries have been made in Europe and that full details of Geraldine's career in Germany and in France will figure at the trial.

"Old World morals, plus New World liberties," is the way Tellegen's attorneys sum of Miss Farrar's early life, before she met her present divorce in regard to the charming divan, which will put her strictly on the defensive.

CORRESPONDENTS IDENTIFIED.

Mrs. Tellegen, her husband says, changed completely after a fortnight's marriage. She became dictatorial. She regarded him merely as a puppet for her pleasure, as a toy for her to play with.

Meanwhile, two correspondents have been identified from the troupe of forty-eight, with which Miss Farrar charges her husband. One, it is said, was a beautiful member of the actor's company. When told that she might have the girl came back with an excited—"it will probably make me famous!"

The other, not unknown is a young woman in private life, who adored Tellegen across the footlights until they grew sufficiently intimate for her to adore him across the candlelights.

Those close to the famous pair hint that Gerry may accuse Lou of a lot of conventionalities, not quite true, but that, also, Lou will accuse Gerry.

Tellegen has cancelled his road engagement with "Blind Youth" and is laid up in his hotel in New York as the result of injuries Farrar, on the other hand, has recovered her recent indisposition and sang in "Carmen" last night.

SECOND ARREST HERE IN MAIL ROBBERY

Salesman Accused of Receiving Stolen Bonds Believed Carried Via Airplane

Charged with being one of the "bosses" involved in the $1,500,000 Los Angeles mail robbery of March 3 last, Charles Solomon of Middlesex street, well known in sporting circles, was arrested today for the Federal authorities.

Police officials expect his capture to result in sensational disclosures regarding up-to-the-minute, scientific crime, for detectives who have worked on the case have termed the job the "airplane mail robbery" and have maintained that part of the stolen bonds were brought to Boston in air machines.

Solomon's arrest was the second in the case within twenty-four hours, his friend and alleged accomplice, Bert R. Chapman of Chelsea street, Mont Boston, having been taken into custody in New York yesterday as he was about to sail for Europe aboard the steamship Aquitania.

Chapman, like Solomon, is charged with "receiving and concealing bonds stolen from the custody of the United States, well knowing them to have been stolen."

Chapman is better known in this city as Kaplan, which was his legal name until four years ago, when he had it changed by law.

SOLOMON A SALESMAN.

Solomon has been known about the city as a bond salesman and had many friends in the sporting fraternity, who never suspected that he was under surveillance by detectives investigating one of the biggest mail robberies of a generation.

Suspicion was directed toward him yesterday when his wife and a four-teen-year-old girl and a ten-year-old boy boarded the Aquitania to say good-bye to Chapman, about to sail. Following Chapman's arrest in his stateroom Mrs. Solomon was closely questioned. She said that the boy was her son, but refused to disclose the identity of the girl.

On March 3 last, four bandits not yet apprehended, held up a United States mail truck at the Southern Pacific station in Alameda and, First street, Los Angeles, and looted it of $500,000 in securities and bonds. They halted the truck by dropping a spiked gate, and then covered the driver with pistols while they ransacked his machine.

CHAPMAN WILL RETURN.

Chapman, according to word received from Deputy Inspector Nee in New York, said he was ready to return to Boston. He told Federal agents he did not know what was in an envelope he had been given to deliver, and that he received it shortly after a fortnight's marriage. She became dictatorial. She regarded him merely as a puppet for her pleasure, as a toy for her to play with.

Meanwhile, two correspondents have been identified from the troupe of forty-eight, with which Miss Farrar charges her husband. One, it is said, was a beautiful member of the actor's company. When told that she might have the girl came back with an excited—"it will probably make me famous!"

The other, not unknown is a young woman in private life, who adored Tellegen across the footlights until they grew sufficiently intimate for her to adore him across the candlelights.

Those close to the famous pair hint that Gerry may accuse Lou of a lot of conventionalities, not quite true, but that, also, Lou will accuse Gerry.

Tellegen has cancelled his road engagement with "Blind Youth" and is laid up in his hotel in New York as the result of injuries Farrar, on the other hand, has recovered her recent indisposition and sang in "Carmen" last night.

"I'll go to Boston without legal preliminaries here," Chapman was quoted as saying. "What's more, I'll pay my own fare."

Chapman, accompanied by his attorney, John Connelly, and Federal detectives, left for Boston at 1 p. m.

Following Chapman's arrest with receiving 20 stolen Liberty bonds and Chapman, or Kaplan, is charged with receiving one-half and one-half of them railroad bonds and half of them foreign.

TO SEARCH VAULT.

Federal and private and railroad detectives who have trailed the bonds are certain that the only way they could have reached Boston was via airplane. They believe that other portions of the loot reached other alleged "fences" in other cities in the same way.

There is a feeling among Federal investigators that much of the loot is yet in this city and that the owner of a down-town trust company are to be visited in search of some of it.

Solomon and Chapman, or Kaplan, have been much together. Kaplan has been a semi-professional singer and amateur and semi-professional dancer and that thing dear to the heart of many a male acquaintance, a "spender." He is the son of an East Boston junk dealer, who declared today that his son was innocent. Kaplan left Boston last Saturday for New York. He is twenty-five years old. Solomon is somewhat older.

Solomon was arraigned before United States Commissioner Wheeler and Chapman was arraigned in New York.

MATTAPAN BOY OF 17 SHOT AT FOUR TIMES

Attacked in Woods by Foe, Who Wounds Him After 3 Attempts to Kill

Object of four murderous attacks within a week, seventeen-year-old James O'Neill was shot in the left shoulder with a bullet from a revolver equipped with a silencer while he was walking in a wooded path off Ithaca street in Mattapan.

O'Neill is in the City Hospital, and his story of differences with a boy of his acquaintance is being investigated, preparatory to the arrest of the latter.

According to O'Neill's story, he has been fired at four times, the revolver being in each case equipped with a silencer. Three attacks were failures, the bullets merely passing over him.

WOMAN FIGHTS FOR LIFE ON STREET

Her Clothing Torn in Exhausting Battle With Stranger in Cambridge

Exhausted by a quarter-mile fight from a huge man who attacked her on White street, Cambridge, her clothing torn and dishevelled as a result of two attacks by him, Mrs. Arthur Hall of No. 245A Summer street, Somerville, dropped in a semi-conscious condition on the piazza of a house on Cherry street, West Somerville, and was saved when a man came out of the house and drove her assailant away.

Mrs. Hall, who is at her home suffering from a near-collapse brought on by her exertions and by fright, declares that she was in such a nervous condition that she cannot even remember the name of the man who came to her rescue, nor can she remember the number of the house to which she ran for help.

Walking home from Cambridge along White street, Mrs. Hall declares the man, who was over six feet tall, leaped out of the shadows and threw his arms around her, attempting to throw her to the ground. Screaming frantically for aid, she struggled against him and finally broke away, running down White street into Elm street, West Somerville.

The man followed close at her heels. Too frightened to notice where she was going, Mrs. Hall dashed up Cherry street until, unable to run any further, she managed to stagger up a flight of steps to the piazza of a residence, where she sank to the floor.

Her assailant, still in pursuit, sprang upon her. As he did so, however, an occupant of the house, hearing the scuffling, sprang out and made for him. The man turned and escaped in the darkness at the end of the street.

Mrs. Hall's unknown rescuer took her in the house and revived her, after which he took her to her home. Police are searching for the assailant although Mrs. Hall was able only to give a meagre description of him.

National Council Denounces Women's Use of Tobacco

Philadelphia, Nov. 16.—Smoking among women was generally denounced at the meeting of the National Council of Women here, as was immodest dressing. The council passed resolutions asking for a stricter enforcement of the law forbidding sale of tobacco in any form to minors.

Mrs. Frances E. Burns of St. Louis led the fight on cigarette smoking among women. She charged that not only was the habit demoralizing to womanly appeal, but absolutely unhealthful. She said that young women, women about to become mothers and even mothers are smoking, and lowering the vitality of the race. Not a voice was lifted in favor of smoking in the great council, claiming to represent 10,000,000 women.

Other speakers told of seeing young women driving automobiles, with cigarettes between their teeth; of girls smoking cigarettes in hotel dining rooms; and of women of mature age smoking, and ogling young men.

EPIDEMIC OF MARRIAGE HITS SHOW

Matrimonial Bee Begins Buzzing After Cast Hits Boston

The following marriages have taken place, or will soon, among members of The Passing Show:

Emily Miles to Willie Howard, the leading comedian.

Helen Mellotte, of the Melotte Sisters, to Lew Pollock, who wrote the music for the production.

Robert Gilbert to Bobbie Lester (girl).

The foregoing are all Passing Show people, and have all been married since they arrived in Boston.

In addition, Annette Fewick will leave the company Saturday, to marry a surgeon of the Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh.

Ida Prosser will leave a week from Saturday, to marry a buyer of a Chicago department store.

There are epidemics of disease and epidemics of fads and foibles, but for a regular, high and low, persistent, far reaching, many embracing epidemic, the epidemic of marriages, now in full force among members of The Passing Show of 1921 at the Shubert Theatre, in Boston, is distinctive, and all by itself.

When the company came to Boston all was quiet. Apparently, romance and coquetry, little round wedding rings and orange blossoms meant nothing beyond the norma' to congregated "temperamenti" 110 strong. That was—when the company arrived.

Then, maybe, it was our Boston air, holy matrimonial; maybe it was just another one of those after the war backwashes; but, whatever it was, when, one night, Emily Miles, prima donna, slipped out and married Willie Howard, comedian, the matrimonial bee began buzzing, for fair, in all the bonnets of members of The Passing Show.

UNAFRAID OF MATRIMONY.

"Other people have tried it, why not we?" asked one article temperament of another among members of the company. As the result, Helen Mellotte braved whatever terrors there may be in matrimony with a glad heart and an unfearing. She became the bride of Lew Pollock, one of the three song writers of the piece.

"To be sure other people have got married and still worried along. Some people have even hinted they have not worried, though they've passed the ordeal of rice and slippers and ministers and honeymoon—therefore—we—well, if not, why not?" so asked brave youths of fair maidens.

Accordingly Robert Gilbert, one of the principles of the "show", married "Bobbie" Lester, a pretty little pony ballet girl, and Annette Fenwick, all of a sudden, got engaged to a surgeon down in Pittsburg, whom she will marry next Saturday; Ida Prosser also said yes to a brave gentleman in Chicago, whom she will give up the stage for, a week from this Saturday, and Elsie May became engaged to Norman Peel, to be married in Montreal Christmas week. Eileen Rooney has already married in Chicago.

ALMOST A SCOURGE.

"Yes, we've certainly got to own up to an epidemic of marriages, which, if continued, will almost be a scourge," Manager J. H. Early said. "But for every marriage which happens in our company, be it of great big principle, or little young chorus lady, we extend congratulations and best wishes, also a little present, from the New York office, where, all the time now, understudies are being arranged for, and new costumes made, against future vacancies which, judging by the past, are bound to occur in the future.

"For we think these marriages are a good omen. Never has there been more happiness in any company, than among members of "The Passing Show." Never have marriages moreover, given more signs of turning out happily forever after. For, many of our little ladies are marrying substantial business and professional men, and will leave the stage for good. In fact, with some, this was a marriage promise.

"So, when Eileen Rooney, in Chicago, went to the hospital for a hurry up operation, and stayed behind to marry her surgeon, we just said—best o luck. A good little actress is bound to make a good little wife."

"LUCKY DOG."

And when Miss Fenwick leaves us now soon, to marry the man she will not name, we just say, "congratulations. He's a lucky dog."

"For" concludes Manager Early, "I believe the start of this epidemic came as members of the company saw how it was possible to be happy —and married—when they observed our already married couple—Flo Somerville, whose husband is a business man in New York; as when they saw John Quinlan, and his wife; when they saw Anthony Joachim and his wife and baby. That finished 'em, and they just made up their minds that matrimony may be a risk but that it is a risk worth taking."

IRISH TO CLAIM DAMAGES FROM BRITAIN

Will Demand Payment of Over-taxation and for Property Destroyed by Troops

By International News Service.

London, Nov. 16.—The questions of Ireland's finances and protection of the British coast have been satisfactorily settled in the negotiations with Lloyd George, according to a prominent Sinn Fein official today.

"Representatives of the British Dominions will be the final arbitrators of the Irish question," this official said, "but we will present a claim upon the Crown for hundreds of millions of pounds for past over-taxation in Ireland and the damages done by British troops during the last two years.

"When we receive this sum, or a part of it, we hope to pay the holders of our bonds in the United States.

"We have pledged nothing and accepted nothing. Unless Lloyd George brings Ulster around and unless his final plans for Irish peace are acceptable we will reject them.

"We have neither finally accepted dominion home rule, pledged our alliance to the British King nor given up the idea of an Irish Republic.

"Arthur Griffith and Michael Collins conferred with Lloyd George for the sole purpose of enabling the Premier to present Sinn Fein with his terms for settlement of the Irish situation."

Ulster, with her back against the wall, was pulling all possible wires today to procure support for the Unionist stand against Lloyd George's proposals for an Irish settlement when the Nationalist Unionist Association discusses the situation at Liverpool tomorrow.

Taking advantage of the temporary lull in the political situation, Lloyd George will go to Bournemouth to rest today, returning to London Friday or Saturday.

Captain Herbert Dixon, M. P., writing in the Evening Standard, said Ulster was faced with the greatest crisis in her history.

"Ulster has been betrayed by men in high places and has been offered as a sacrifice to the vanity of England's Prime Minister," Dixon wrote.

"Standing absolutely alone, but calena she is a force until conquered and unconquerable."

RAIN COMING, SAYS BOSTON FORECASTER

Get out your umbrella! Forecaster Smith's prediction is rain tonight or Thursday, with slowly rising temperatures and variable winds. The rain that's coming is moving east from the Ohio Valley. The coldest place in New England was Greenville, Me., which reported 24 degrees, and it was 42 at Nantucket and Block Island.

WIFE DECLARES 'COUNTESS' WON HER HUSBAND

Boston Woman Asks $10,000 From Alleged Rival Who Runs Franklin, N. H., Hotel

Mrs. Portia Morrison of No. 34 Union Park, this city, values the love and affection of her husband at $10,000.

At least that is the sum she is asking in the suit she has filed against Miss Effie A. Curwen of Franklin, N. H., who is tall, beautiful and known to her intimates as "The Countess."

Mrs. Morrison says that Miss Curwen, who is the proprietor of the Hotel Merrimac, Central street, Franklin, has "vamped" Chester Morrison and wrecked the happy home life of the Morrison family.

Morrison has been employed for the last three months on the new postoffice building Uncle Sam is constructing at Franklin, and has been living at Miss Curwen's hotel. He and Mrs. Morrison have been married eight years and have two small children.

Immediately after the filing of the suit the furniture of the hotel, Miss Curwen's new automobile in which she is alleged to have gone riding with Morrison, and her bank account were attached.

The feminine Bonifacc is a tall extremely handsome and prepossessing woman of the blond type. To her friends here she has confided that she is a member of British nobility and is related to the royal family.

She went to Franklin about a year ago from Boston, and purchased the Merrimac Hotel, which she immediately began to repair, alter and improve. Since that time she has been doing a good business.

"I know a woman could make a go of the hotel business just as well as a man," she declared. "And I have."

Miss Curwen merely smiles, showing dazzling white teeth, beautifully regular, when she is asked to tell of her relationship with British royalty.

ENTRANTS IN $5,000 BOOK TITLE PICTURE TEST SHOULD READ RULES

The first thing to be done by everybody who enters such a competition as the Boston American's $5,000 Book Title Picture Test is READ THE RULES.

One of the most important of these rules—all are important—is that the Test Pictures are not to be sent in from day to day but are to be held by the participant until the close of the Test, when they must be sent in "all together at one time."

Although this rule has been printed daily since Monday of last week the Test Editor receives twenty or more carefully addressed envelopes every day with one, two, three or more Test Pictures.

Please read the rules and please send in no pictures before the close of the Test.

WELL ALONG ON WAY.

Today's picture is No. 9, testimony that time flies and that we are well along on our way to the great day when the Boston American will print the names of the 219 readers who have been most successful in their contest of wits with Mr. Artist.

The Correct Title of Today's picture will be found in the List of Titles printed below it. One title in this list fits today's picture better than any other title in the list. This will be true always. That does not mean that there may not be other titles in this list which APPEAR to fit the picture. There probably are! One title fits the picture better than any other. That title is the Correct Title. When you find it you will be SURE of it. You need look no farther.

This $5,000 Book Title Picture Test will consist of Sixty Pictures, for each of which you are required to find the Correct Title. The following rich rewards will be paid to readers of the Boston American, residing in New England or Canada, who send in the largest numbers of Correct Titles at the close of the Test:

LIST OF AWARDS.

First award	$1,000
Second award	750
Third award	500
Fourth award	400
Fifth award	300
Sixth award	200
Seventh award	150
Eighth award	100
Ninth award	50
100 awards of $10 each	1,000
110 awards of $5 each	550
Total	$5,000

These awards will be paid promptly and without question to those who write the largest numbers of Correct Titles.

ILLUSTRATE TITLES.

Each of the 60 Pictures will represent the title of a book. Not the contents, not the story, but the title.

The Book Test editor is making every effort to keep up with a growing correspondence, but still is a day or two behind.

If you will read the Rules of the Book Test carefully, however, you may not want to write a letter. The rules tell everything it is necessary to know in order to be successful.

Today's is another Easy Picture for Beginners. Even if you never heard of Washington Irving or Joe Jefferson, you know today's title without looking for it in the list.

Once more the Test Editor calls attention to the absence of text from these pictures. No "talk" in them! Nothing like the Movie Play and the Song Test in that respect. Here, the pictures—and only the pictures—give the titles. There may be a few exceptions to this general rule, and four of the first fifty drawings contain one word apiece.

OPEN TO ALL READERS.

The $5,000 Book Title Picture Test is wide open to every reader. Every member of the family may take part; father, mother, cousins, sisters, aunts. Each may send in a separate parcel of Test Pictures. Only one award can be paid to one family, but if at the close of the Test it appears that more than one has been earned in your household the one award paid will be the highest to which your folks are entitled.

"It is not necessary to "enroll." Begin now to cut and save the pictures and write your titles. Read the rules. Know what you are doing. Send in nothing before the close of the Test.

Another Test Picture will be printed in tomorrow's Boston American. It will be yours, beyond the shadow of a doubt, if you have been careful to Tell the newsdealer you are taking part in the $5,000 Book Title Test and MUST have the Boston American, REGULARLY, for 60 days!

BOOK TEST RULES

The Boston American Book Title Test is a test of skill and judgment open to all readers of the Boston American, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

Two hundred and nineteen cash awards will be paid to the reader in New England or Canada who submit the largest percentage of correct titles to the sixty pictures to be published, one each day for sixty days consecutively (Sundays excepted) in the Boston American.

All employes of the Boston American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in the awards.

The test will consist of sixty pictures, each representing the title of a well-known book, to be printed one picture each day in the Boston American for the first picture on Monday, November 14, 1921.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running or which may be run by the Boston American will not debar anyone from entering this test.

Every participant or any of all members of a family will be allowed to submit one set (sixty titles) to the pictures numbered consecutively, but each person and no person or family shall be entitled to more than one award and not more than one award shall be given in any one family.

Each and every title must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American or on a piece of some book in form of itself, accompanied by the picture furnished by the Boston American, or a pen or pencil copy thereof, and must have the name, address, etc., of the participant on each title blank.

Do not send your titles in "list" form, that is, do not write titles under one another on a piece of paper.

In case there are no complete sets of correct titles, awards will be given to the person submitting the nearest correct solutions (total weight to skill and judgment).

Ties, if any, will be decided by lot made on the basis of neatness, judgment and correctness, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied participants will receive similar awards.

Under no circumstances should participants send in their titles before the end of the Test, as any sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. KEEP your titles at home, fill in the coupon after the Test is over, arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together at one time.

There will not be a factor in making the awards. The first titles sent in after the Test closes will stand no better than the last submitted.

All titles must be delivered to the Boston American title headquarters, at No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., either by mail or in person within the specified time limit, which will be announced later.

All envelopes or packages containing titles must be legibly addressed as follows: "Book Title Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., P. O. Box 230," and each envelope or package must bear the name and address of the sender legibly written or stamped on the upper left-hand corner.

All pictures in the Test will contain written or printed matter. If mailed it is absolutely necessary that the packages be fully prepaid at postal rates, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first-class matter. The Boston American reserves the right to refuse to consider any sets of titles on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

There will be no title or answer book to buy. List of Book Titles will be printed in the Boston American. The list appearing will contain among others the correct title.

Participants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the Book Title Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass. Questions will be answered as far as possible through the columns of the Boston American. Participants desire personal replies may inclose stamped and self-addressed envelopes.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to these conditions that it may deem necessary for fair and properly conducting the Test, and the decision of the Boston American Book Title Editor shall be final. Entering the Test will be absolutely final, and the entry of any one will be a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations now made or to be made.

NORWAY DENIES DANISH RULE OVER GREENLAND

Christiania, Nov. 16.—The Norwegian government has informed Denmark it cannot recognize the extension of Danish sovereignty to the whole of Greenland, which was announced last May. Norway contends the Danish action prejudices the rights of Norwegians to whaling, sealing and fishing which they have until now, carried on unchallenged in Greenland waters.

BOMB PLOT AGAINST QUEEN SOPHIA FAILS

London, Nov. 16.—A bomb plot directed against Queen Sophia of Greece, who was on her way to Salonika, was frustrated, according to a news dispatch from Vienna today. An inspector attached to the queen's party was killed when the plot was discovered.

NEW HAMPSHIRE BOMB PLOT IS BLOCKED

Sadly Missile Found Hidden in Locker in the Laconia Car Works

Bomb experts of the Massachusetts tice, headed by Walter L. Wedger, emist of the department, were today ey investigating a bomb found in a icker of the Laconia (N. H.) car orks, and the discovery of which is lieved to have blocked a plot to urn the Armistice Day parade in Laconia into an affair of horror.

After an examination of the bomb, hemist Wedger declared it one of te most dangerous he had ever seen, nd capable of killing or maiming scores of people, while the dynamite contained was sufficient to destroy a large building.

The bomb was found in the locker of Joseph Christchrif, a Bulgarian, by fellow-workers who were seeking for moonshine whiskey with which to celebrate the day.

The explosive was in a copper oil container, and the dynamite tapped down with sheets from a Boston newspaper of May 1, thoroughly soaked in nitro-glycerine.

Above this was a large quantity of iron shot, such as could have been obtained at the car works, and sufficient to spread death and destruction over a large area.

Authorities of other States are cooperating with the New Hampshire police in efforts to run down the plotters.

GIRL THOUGHT SLAIN IS FOUND IN SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, Nov. 16.—Bertha Baker, eighteen-year-old Hartford, Ct., girl, who for three weeks has been believed to have been a murder victim, was found in a rooming house here and arrested on a statutory charge. She was in company of a man more than twice her age, police say. It had been thought that Miss Baker was the young woman whose head and torso were found in a swamp in Long Island City.

CHARGE AGAINST TRAVIS NOW NOL PROSSED

Indictment in Fall River Case Result of Crusade Against Jitney Men

Fall River, Nov. 16.—Charges of obstructing justice and inciting to perjury against Manuel Travis, who was arrested following a hearing granted to Sergeant Daniel Killeen by the Board of Police, were not pressed by Judge Hanify in District Court.

The police will proceed against Travis through the Superior Court now sitting at New Bedford.

Travis was indicted on both charges by the grand jury and these charges brought against him were the result of the police activities against a number of local Jitney men a few months ago, when sixteen of these men were arrested on charges of having violated the moral laws.

CLASSES AT B. U. PLEDGE QUOTAS TO FUND

Vote to Subscribe Large Sums to Undergraduate Endowment Campaign

Boston University's undergraduate Endowment Campaign is under way. Enthusiastic assurances of uniform support throughout all departments took concrete form with the unanimous voting of quotas, in some cases as high as $20,000, $25,000 and $30,000 per class.

"You have an opportunity to give the greatest demonstration of college loyalty," said President Samuel H. Murlin, telling the students that the success of this campaign was in their hands.

At the second meeting of the committees of all the departments Professor Heber H. Harper, secretary of the campaign fund, presided.

DRIVE IS ALL IMPORTANT.

"It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of this drive to Boston University," he said, speaking to the workers. "It has been said concerning the men who fought in the World War that 20 per cent. were heroes, 60 per cent. were what their officers made them. You are the officers of this campaign. The importance of this student campaign cannot be overestimated. It will determine the success or failure of the whole campaign.

"Harvard, Brown, Wesleyan, Boston College, Holy Cross and Wellesley have won their victories. Boston University will not fail. The responses which has been made by the classes and departments already is far beyond our expectations."

Large bulletins in each department will show the progress of the campaign day by day. The bulletins will indicate the amount raised, the percentage subscribed and many other points which are expected to be of particular interest because of the rivalry between departments.

CAMPAIGN SHEET DAILY.

"The Booster," a mimeographed sheet, will be printed every day. About 1,000 copies will be issued by the publicity department. A cartoon by "Tim" Ward, editor of the "Beanpot," the humorous monthly, is planned for each edition.

Charlotte Spencer of East Boston, president of the senior class of the College of Liberal Arts, affiliated with almost every organization in the school, and one of the most popular girls, is just one of the many hustlers who are striving to unify their efforts to their class far beyond anticipation.

BOGUS "YOUNGER SON" MULCTS QUINCY FOLK

Quincy police are "paging" an "English remittance man" whose smooth tongue and plausible story netted him about $400 in easy money in that city within the last few weeks. He represented himself as a younger son awaiting his remittance, unaccountably held up owing to the stupidity of cablegram officials, and minus luggage delayed in an express office. When he extended his credit to the $400 mark he departed. English families were his principal victims.

PUTS LIVERY AUTOS IN "PUBLIC CARS" CLASS

Augusta, Me., Nov. 16.—Deputy Attorney-General William H. Fisher of Augusta in an opinion rendered today at the request of Secretary of State Frank W. Ball declares that motor vehicles when used in whole or in part for carrying passengers come under the provisions of the law requiring a double fee for the registration of "public cars."

Pay Cut in Fitchburg

Fitchburg, Nov. 16.—A pay cut of approximately 10 per cent in the wages of the employees of the Wheelwright Paper Co. goes into effect today. Several hundred men are affected by the order.

MOTHER!

Open Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" now will thoroughly clean the little bowels and in a few hours you have a well, playful child again. Even a cross, feverish, constipated child loves its "fruity" taste, and mothers can rest easy because it never fails to work all the sour bile and poisons right out of the stomach and bowels without griping or upsetting the child.

Tell your druggist you want only the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation.

THOSE fancies of the mode that mark a frock or a tailleur as of "this season's" do much the same for the tea-gown and the negligee. Very Chinese in feeling—as so many really smart things are—is a slip of cloth-of-silver, low of waistline and slender of silhouette, achieving distinction from a black velvet placque embroidered in gold and silver, posed at the waistline. The slip uses a full sleeve, slit half way up, that reaches nearly to the ground, while over the slip is worn a black velvet cape-jacket, embroidered in large motifs in silver and gold. And with silver cloth to bind her hair, mademoiselle is more than ready to pour tea.

SOFT peach-colored chiffon and silver lace make the most delicate of negligees. The slip of chiffon completes itself with a silver lace coat edged and belted across the front with silver galon and tiny silver tassels stand between the negligee and the ground.

70,000 ELIGIBLE TO VOTE IN LOWELL

Lowell, Nov. 16.—A compilation of Lowell's adult population shows that nearly 70,000 men and women are eligible to vote, so far as age is concerned, whereas there are only 32,000 registered voters. The number of voters is being rapidly increased by activities on the part of the women, who daily outnumber the men in registering.

HARVARD STUDENTS IN FAVOR OF DISARMING

FIANCEE PLANS FIGHT ON WILL OF HANNA

June A. Evans Hires Lawyers to Obtain Property She Claims Was Promised

New York, Nov. 16.—June Avis Evans, the woman of mystery in Dan Hanna's life, has started preparations to contest the millionaire publisher's last will by which his estate was left to his sons. Representatives of Banton, Ferguson & Moore, attorneys for Avis, made a photographic copy of the remarkable will in the White Plains Court House and announced that every legal method will be used to obtain for her the annuity and property which Hanna at one time promised.

Leslie C. Ferguson, who is directing the preliminary investigation, declined to reveal the exact identity of Miss Evans, but said that at the millionaire's death at Westchester she was living at the Croft, the Hanna estate in Watertown N. Y., and that he expected to marry her.

SHE CLAIMS PROPERTY.

Miss Evans, through her attorneys, asserted that she was entitled, even with the will in its present condition, to $25,000 a year for life, a large amount of personal property in addition to the house, horses, automobiles, furniture and other contents of the Watertown mansion. His estate is said in total $10,000,000.

In discussing the testament with its blots and cancellations, Mr. Ferguson said:

"All this property is apparently given Miss Evans under the will. If he died before marrying Miss Evans he provided in his will that she was to receive $25,000 annually from a trust fund which the will directed should be established. Under the blots on the foolscap paper on which the will was made was this notation:

"'Should she marry, this instrument is to become null and void. Witness: H. W. Foster and D. K. Hanna.'

"Other writing under the blots declared that it was the intention of Mr. Hanna to marry June Avis Evans. Other blotted out words were to the effect that the property at 'The Croft' in Watertown was to go to Miss Evans, and this clause also was witnessed by Hanna and Foster. Mr. Foster will take every possible step to obtain for Miss Evans the bequests made in the will."

CHANGES CALLED ILLEGAL.

The lawyers believe that the unblotted provisions of the will dividing the bulk of the estate between the sons of the testator will not stand because Mr. Hanna attempted to modify the testament, and they contend that the modification were illegal.

H. W. Foster, whose name is written as one of the witnesses of the cancellations by blotting, was a secretary of Mr. Hanna and is a $25,000 beneficiary under the will.

The attorneys for Miss Evans said the writing under the blots could be deciphered by holding the foolscap to the light. At the Hanna Westchester home, it was said that Miss Evans was unknown there.

TYPIST FORCED TO LEAVE JOB IN CAMBRIDGE

Threat of Legal Action Against Auditor Is Believed Cause of Girl Quitting

Miss Marion Hardy, girl stenographer, whose retention in the employ of the city of Cambridge by City Auditor Charles A. Thurston after her dismissal had been demanded by Commissioner Paysen Dana of the Civil Service Commission caused Dana to threaten legal action against the auditor, is no longer working in the Cambridge City Hall.

This fact was disclosed by investigators of the Civil Service Commission, who were looking into the matter preparatory to requesting Attorney-General Allen to proceed against Thurston for violation of the civil service laws.

When they reported to Dana that the girl was not working for the city of Cambridge any more, he announced that his request on the attorney-general would be withheld, for the present, at least.

Miss Hardy's removal from the city employ was requested by Dana after she had twice, it is alleged, failed to pass competitive civil service examinations. A stormy controversy between Dana and Thurston ensued, the auditor declaring that the girl was a capable stenographer regardless of the outcome of the examinations. For some time the civil service commissioner was unaware that she had not been dismissed, as Thurston paid her salary on personal stenographic expense vouchers.

Her final removal is believed due to Dana's threat to institute legal proceedings against Thurston.

ATTLEBORO MINISTER FOR CHURCH ADVERTISING

Attleboro, Nov. 16.—"I have often thought that newspapermen must need smelling salts at hand to use when church workers call," said the Rev. Edward E. Wells, speaking at the Methodist Church last evening on "Newspapers and Advertising."

"Let us be done with these cheap methods of religion," he said. "We have no right to ask for free advertising until we have paid for space. All publications are most generous and considerate. A church must advertise to be business-like. Every business man has found that advertising pays. Why not advertise the church?"

150 GIRLS MAKE COLLECTION FOR 'SALLIES' FUND

Total Subscriptions in Campaign Announced by Chairmen as $120,000

What 150 pretty girls can do to loosen up tight pockets will be proven when the returns from the Salvation Army Maintenance Fund drive are counted up.

These girls were loaned by employers in the city. Equipped with the familiar cylindrical box they went about the offices and the streets, and collected spare dimes and quarters galore.

At the noon luncheon of the chairmen of teams it was announced that $150,000 is the total to date. It was expected that $200,000 would be secured.

John H. Johnson of the Buick Company suggested that chairmen underwrite a sum to be paid within a few months, and $16,000 was pledged by the limited number present.

Fifty children from the West End Day Nursery were present and rendered several songs. This institution is one which must be closed if sufficient funds are not available.

The sum of $2,959 was collected by the sale of doughnuts in hotels by volunteers recruited from the telephone exchanges. They were directed by Miss Mary R. Meaney, a toll chief operator.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCETY PEOPLE

Boston Elite Represented at the New York National Horse Show

By BETTY ALDEN

DESPITE the fact that the opening night of the Metropolitan Opera season offered rousing competition, society from Gotham and elsewhere was very much present at the first night of the National Horse Show throughout the week, was Horse Show on Monday evening.

This year the show, which will stazed in the Squadron A Armory, just a block from Park avenue, so that the elite had but a few steps—or one night butter say, "purrs of the engine," to go. The morning, afternoon and evening sessions were well patronized by sport enthusiasts among the fashionable world.

Eleonora Sears who quite naturally was one of the earliest to arrive upon the scene, was well able to represent Hub society. The well-known member of the Sears family, when she and her show horses and ponies at auction at Durland's Riding Academy in New York last year and announced her withdrawal from the show ring, retained the bantam hackney harness mare, "Irvington Nipper Girl."

Miss Sears was reported to have paid $5,000 for the horse, then a four-year-old, to the manager of J. Marcy Willet's place, Casellis Farm. The Boston horsewoman is still the owner of the sprightly little daughter of Irvington Sunbeam and Maid of Irvington, and has entered her in this week's show.

At the opening session Miss Sears, who had one of the boxes, made a notable figure, gowned in black satin and wearing a drooping black hat trimmed with black ostrich fringe falling well down over her right shoulder. She has, of course, many friends among Gotham's socially-elect, who greeted her from all sides of the armory. Thus "Elleo" still retains a minor active interest in a sport in which, in days gone by, she was one of the leading spirits.

The official side of the show was reflected in the attendance during the afternoon Reginald C. Vanderbilt, a member of the executive committee of the association had a box, and with him was his attractive young daughter, Cathleen Vanderbilt. The latter had as her guest the daughter of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, 2d, Miss Muriel Vanderbilt, who wore a frock of Scotch plaid, red predominating, topped with a black hat. "Reggie's" daughter was gowned in an afternoon frock of black with wing sleeves of green, having immense black cuffs and a small black hat. Here, as elsewhere, black seems to have sounded the keynote of the hour in the world of mode and fashion.

ELEONORA SEARS SEEN AT SHOW
Miss Eleonora Sears (at right) snapped with Mrs. William Clothier of Philadelphia at a recent show. Miss Sears is now attending the National Horse Show, Squadron A Armory, New York.

A unique feature of the horse show is the tea room adjoining the ring, which is being conducted to aid the unemployment fund and the regular Winter activities of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor. Each afternoon a group of the season's debutantes, all trimly garbed in Martha Washington frocks, take orders for light refreshments. The tea room, by the way, has a Boston interest for Mrs. Richard T. Wilson is one of its patronesses. Mrs. Wilson, who is a leader of the smart set in Gotham as well as in Newport, is a niece of Mrs. E. Rollins Morse of Boston.

A word or two about the interior of the Armory, as transformed by a clever architect and interior decorator, might not be amiss. The whole interior resembles a country club in Autumn, with real oak trees and much foliage. The promenade has the verdancy and depth of a country club lawn, and allows more space for the display of gowns in promenading. The boxes are built low, and also the seats in front of the tea room, which gives a feeling of informality and intimacy to the on-looker.

The opening performance of the Metropolitan Opera season found the usual coterie of lavishly-gowned women and correctly attired men crowding the famous "golden horseshoe" boxes. There was no end of solat to the audience which listened to Amelia Galli-Curci warble the role of "Violetta Valery" in Verdi's "La Traviata." Several matrons wore trophies from the "gown-hunt" abroad, known as Paris creations, and among the latter was Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. Mr. and Mrs. Whitney had in their box Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney, who were at the Cedarcroft cottage at Pride's Crossing on the North Shore last Summer. In the same group was Joan Whitney, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney.

Mrs. Richard T. Wilson, niece of Mrs. E. Rollins Morse of this city, had Mrs. Ogden Goelet's box and with her and Mr. Wilson were Mr. and Mrs. Francis Key Pendleton, Mrs. Harmanus B. Duryea, Albert Morris Bagby, Marquis Dugnano, who is a member of the Roman Senate; Antonio y'Algara and Joseph P. Kennedy, who came up from Baltimore for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Houston A. Thomas and their daughter, Miss Marjorie Thomas, have closed "The Locusts," their place in Hamilton, and have just sailed from New York aboard the Aquitania, bound for Paris. As is their custom, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas will spend the Winter months with Mrs. Thomas' mother, Madame Bonnet, in Switzerland. Mme. Bonnett came to this country last Summer for the first time, when she visited the Thomases at their North shore estate, and is returning home with her son-in-law and family.

Marjorie Thomas is the fiancee of John F. A. Davis, Harvard, '15, son of Judge and Mrs. Charles Thornton Davis of Brookline. The marriage of the young people, whose engagement was announced early in the Summer, is expected to take place this Spring upon the return of Miss Thomas' family to this country.

MANY society people are to be found today at the Copley-Plaza participating in the large number of events which form a part of Women's Day. The entire hotel, for this day only, is being run by prominent matrons and members of the younger set.

The Misses Berthe and Francesca Braggiotti, Vincent Club girls, are giving their famous Reapers Dance as a part of the program of "Hansel and Gretel," the opera scheduled for this afternoon at the San Carlo Opera Company at the Boston Opera House. The proceeds are to be turned over to the Girl Scout organization.

Mrs. Roger F. Hooper (Justine V. R. Barber) of Beacon street numbers among the Bostonians who have arrived at the Hotel Chatham in New York city for the annual National Horse Show.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge will entertain at dinner on Friday evening at his residence on Massachusetts avenue in the capital, in honor of the French delegates to the arms conference. His daughter, Mrs. Augustus Peabody Gardner, will be the hostess.

The Rev. and Mrs. George Grenville Merrill have arrived at Newport from Stockbridge to visit Mrs. Merrill's sister, Mrs. John Nicholas Brown. The latter has again taken a house in Boston in order to be near her son, who is at Harvard.

Word has been received by friends of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James of New York, who are circling the globe on board their yacht, the "Aloha," that they expect to spend Christmas in Shanghai. At present the are in Honolulu. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lindon Smith of Mount Vernon street will join Mr. and Mrs. James when their boat reaches Java and will continue with the Jamaes to France.

Secretary of War and Mrs. Weeks were among the guests at the dinner given recently at the capital by the Polish minister and Princess Lubomirske.

MILLER SCORES ST. LAWRENCE SHIP CANAL

New York Governor Says It Would Divert Bottoms From United States

By International News Service.

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 16.—Governor Nathan L. Miller of New York, in a speech before the Atlantic Deepe Waterways Convention here today, declared the proposed St. Lawrence ship canal, linking the Great Lakes with the Atlantic Ocean, to be impractical and said it would divert shipping from American ports to those of foreign countries.

Governor Miller charged "insidious propaganda" in favor of the canal and said that $160,000 was being used to force the hand of Congress in acting to authorise starting the waterway. The canal would require one-fifth the total sum expended in the improvement of our rivers and harbors during the entire history of the country, he said.

"The time has not yet come," Miller went on, "when the trading of support for local improvements can commit the treasury of the United States to a vast project for the improvement of a waterway in another country regardless of its merits."

He urged improvements of the harbors on the Pacific and the tributary rivers, improvement of the gulf ports and improvement of rivers and ports on the Atlantic coast.

The assertion of the proposal that the New England States could be built for the construction of the canal to benefit the West is only equalled by the imagination of those who are seeking to convince the country that ocean-going vessels will ever navigate an inland waterway more than 2,000 miles long," declared Governor Miller.

GREAT BRITAIN ACCUSED OF ASSISTING WRANGEL

Riga, Nov. 16.—Charges that Great Britain already had transported a number of General Wrangel's followers from Constantinople to Vladivostok, together with rumors that the British were collecting large forces of "White" Russians in Bombay and Bagdad are contained in a statement sent out by the Russian official news agency. Aboard a British military transport which has arrived at Vladivostok, states the agency, are 768 Russians, of whom 600 are officers in British uniform and formerly served with Wrangel's or Denekine's forces.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad tasting coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c and 30c.—Advertisement.

SULPHUR CLEARS A PIMPLY SKIN

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.—Advertisement.

Makes Curls or "Ear Muffs" Stay in Place

You will be glad to learn that you can keep your hair beautifully wavy and curly by using a perfectly harmless liquid known to druggists as "slimerine." You dress your hair as usual with a clean tooth brush just before doing up. Just a few drops are enough or so you will be most agreeably surprised with the effect. And the effect lasts for quite a considerable time, as a small bottle goes a long way and is quite economical to use. Pure slimerine is really beneficial to the hair and there is no greasiness, stickiness nor anything unpleasant about it. It is a good idea to divide the hair into strands and moisten these one at a time, drawing the brush down the full length.

With the aid of liquid slimerine it is easy to shape the prettiest "bar waves" and easy to keep them as placed all day. Just try it!—Advertisement.

Fitchburg, Nov. 16.—Police are investigating today a mysterious attack on Miss Lauriana Maxfield, sixteen-year-old employe of the Bennett Shoe Company, who is believed to have been clubbed and robbed while on her way home from work.

Miss Maxfield left the company's plant on North street and started down Summer street towards her home. Remembering either the approach of home at No. 26 Ollills court. Without any person from behind, or any warning feeling of faintness, she told police, she suddenly found herself lying on the ground, emerging from unconsciousness.

Her pay envelope, which she had carried in her hand bag, was gone. The amount of money it contained was not made public.

Police believe that someone crept up behind the girl as she walked along in the dusk and knocked her unconscious with a blow from a sandbag or blackjack.

She is not subject to fainting spells, it is said, and has been in good health recently.

DRIVER KILLED AS AUTO FALLS THREE FLOORS

Machine Plunges Down Elevator Well of West End Garage

Backing his automobile through the guard rail of an elevator well at the American Garage at No. 24 Chardon street, West End, Alfred D. Routh of No. 1 Stanford street fell three stories to the top of the elevator on the street floor, with the machine and was almost instantly killed today.

Garage employes are at a loss to account for the accident. Routh was thirty-five years old, and a chauffeur employed by Charles Lodoronet of No. 1 Stanford street.

Routh was on the fourth floor preparing to take his employer's car out of the garage. Without looking behind him he started to back up preparatory to driving to the elevator well for the descent to the street.

When the auto struck the elevator car there were two men in the elevator, E. M. Swede and Jack Leonard, both garage employes. Neither was injured. Swede was operating the elevator and Leonard was in a touring car, which was being taken to the street floor.

It was necessary to call firemen to disentangle the body from the wreckage on top of the elevator. The body was taken to the Relief Hospital. The automobile was destroyed.

Never were our stocks so concentrated on the five furs women want—Hudson seal, raccoon, muskrat, nearseal and marmot.

Never were we more insistent on keeping up quality.

No matter how tempting a low price, we refuse to buy where such a price means a lowering of our standard quality.

Conditions in the wholesale FUR market

IN view of the marked advances in the wholesale price of skins, ranging from 10% to 100%, our heavy purchases of furs as far back as last Spring, which to some seemed ill advised, now guarantee you savings.

Not for a long time have we been able to say so positively that to buy Filene furs now means savings. To delay means to miss an opportunity to buy furs of known quality at prices which will not be possible when our present stock is sold, judging by present indications.

CURLEY RAPS MURPHY AND PELLETIER

Declares District Attorney Should Not Quit His Office "Under Fire"

Former Mayor James M. Curley, speaking at a public mass meeting in the Mary Hemenway School, Dorchester, declared that District Attorney Pelletier should not quit his office "under fire," adding that "all logical reason for his longer continuance as a Mayoralty candidate" has gone.

Curley asserted that for Pelletier the "path of duty"—to remain in the district attorney's office—is clearly marked.

The former Mayor then turned his attention to John R. Murphy, the Mayoralty candidate who received the Good Government Association's endorsement, remarking that the requisite needed by a candidate to insure the backing of that body is an unusually large bank balance and referring to Murphy as "a grandfather from Charlestown."

Curley continued his attack on the Boston Elevated Railway Company, asserting that if chosen Mayor one of his first acts will be to order the city law department to make a thorough investigation of the legislative act authorizing a ten-cent fare. He ridiculed Murphy's statement that a five-cent rate is an impossibility for years to come, and pledged himself to use every effort to secure such a fare rate

Fort Norman Residents Forget Whether It Is Day or Night

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 16.—Residents of the Fort Norman oil fields newly discovered in the remote northwest of Canada along the Mackenzie river, forget whether it is day or night. This is the result of the long periods of daylight.

It was brought out in an incident related by O. S. Finnie, of the Canadian Department of the Interior. A native accosted Mr. Finnie, asking the time.

"It's 11 o'clock," was the reply.

"Day or night?" inquired the native, with a languid glance at the sun which had been shining continually for days.

The long sunlight periods apparently take away from the natives all sense of time and they eat when they are hungry and sleep when they want to without reference to what elsewhere are night hours.

VETERAN SENDS PLEA FOR XMAS FUND HELP

Jobless Fighter Who Spent Fourteen Months Overseas Appeals for Basket

Destitute World War veterans, who have been unable to obtain employment, continue to apply to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund for assistance.

One of the most pathetic letters to the Christmas Fund Editor, came from a World War veteran, who has been out of work for the past eight months. This man says he is a graduate of English High School and Amherst College and, although willing to work, has been unable to secure employment to support his family. He adds that all he wants is work, but being unable to get any, asks for a Christmas parcel of food from the American Fund. His letter follows:

"I have been advised by a friend, who is a great admirer of The Boston American, of your wonderful work for veterans, to try you, and ask to be remembered Christmas.

14 MONTHS OVERSEAS.

"I am a veteran of both the Spanish-American and World Wars. I served fourteen months overseas in the World War, and was discharged as Sergeant Major, July 16, 1919. I am married and I have been out of work eight months. I had to give up my home and take my wife to live with her people and they are poor, as her father makes only $18 a week. He has wife and four other children.

"If I do not find a position, I will certainly appreciate it. If you will remember me in your Basket List. If I am able to receive a position of some kind, I won't need aid, and will let you know at once, as I am not a beggar. I am a graduate of English High and Amherst College, and I am willing to do any kind of work.

"All I want is the work. I don't want charity, but want work to support my family."

This letter is but one of the many which have been received from World War veterans, or their wives and children. They represent only one element of the thousands of persons who will be fed at Christmas in their homes, as the result of food given to them through the medium of the Christmas Fund of this paper.

Every effort will be made to feed as many people as possible, as there is unusual need this year. Volunteer workers assisting the Christmas Fund Editor all report the same thing—that there is more destitution in Greater Boston now than there has been at any time during the past ten years.

COLONEL HAYDEN HELPS.

Mrs. Caroline Hall Washburn, society editor of the Boston Sunday Advertiser, has turned in $100 which has been contributed to the Fund by Colonel Charles Hayden, the widely known Boston and New York banker. Mr. Hayden is a member of the firm of Hayden, Stone & Co. He is also well known in social and military circles, and says that it gives him great pleasure to assist the American Christmas Fund.

Although M. Hayden spends most of his time in New York, he continues keeping up his old time affiliations with Bostonians. Last year Colonel Hayden made a similar gift to the fund.

In the same mail with Colonel Hayden's check for $100 came another for $1.00 from Frank S. Ferreria, of East Boston, who wrote:

"Enclosed please find $1.00 for the Christmas Basket Fund. I hope it will be of service, and wish that I could give more."

We like the spirit of Mr. Ferreria. Every donation, no matter how small, is welcome, and will assist in helping feed the needy. It is the spirit behind the gift that counts.

Duncan N. Stewart, a widely-known Boston business man, enclosed his check for $25, asking that it be credited to the Misses Barbara and Jessie Stewart.

Many contributions are coming in from Greater Boston merchants. The United Silk Mills, of Bedford street, sent a check for $5.00, with the following:

"Wishing you great success in this wonderful movement, we beg to remain."

MACHINES OFFERED.

George Green, a member of the firm of the Grow Tire Company, has assisted the Fund by offering the use of machines for necessary work connected with the Fund.

An unusually novel appeal, in behalf of the Fund will be sent out tonight at 8 o'clock by wireless. It will be sent by The American Radio & Research Corporation, from its big station at Medford Hillside, through the courtesy of H. M. Taylor, manager of the plant. Mr. Taylor is highly interested in making the Christmas Fund a success, and believes that this novel appeal sent through the air, will result in feeding many impoverished families.

POSTPONE CONCERT OF GREAT CHALIAPINE

The appearance of Feodor Chaliapine, the great Russian singer, in Symphony Hall Boston has had to be postponed from tomorrow night until the end of the month, in that a heavy cold, from which he is now suffering, would have prevented him from doing adequate justice to his voice and his art.

FORGERY LAID TO OPPONENTS BY O'CONNOR

Says Veterans' Leader Was Kept From Rally by Fictitious Letter

The charge that his opponents in the mayoralty campaign have resorted to forgery in their attempts to defeat his candidacy was made in a series of public rallies in Dorchester, Jamaica Plain and Roxbury by Charles S. O'Connor.

O'Connor asserted that someone had prevented Cornelius Donovan, president of the Veterans' Protective League, from tendering him the endorsement of that organization at a public meeting in Roslindale last Saturday night by a letter, written over O'Connor's forged signature, which told him the meeting had been postponed.

Donovan, O'Connor said, had been expected to appear and make a public statement to the effect that his organization had indorsed O'Connor. He failed to appear, however, and when questioned about it by O'Connor later, showed a letter he had received telling him he need not come because the meeting had been called off. O'Connor declared he will begin an investigation and will start criminal prosecutions for forgery if the identity of the author of the letter can be discovered.

He continued: "My opponents are afraid of me now. My strength is growing by leaps and bounds. Nightly I have the best attended meetings. Every hall is filled to capacity. I am talking issues. I am telling the public face to face what I intend to do to correct the taxation evils. It is the most popular issue in a mayor's fight for twenty years. Men and women in every walk of life, regardless of party lines, are coming to my support."

MURPHY IS FIRST TO GET FULL NOMINATION

John R. Murphy went over the top the first candidate for Mayor to have his nomination papers certified by the Election Department. The department at the time of closing had certified 3,300 signatures, which was 300 more than necessary to place Mr. Murphy in nomination. Mr. Murphy, at the time of closing, was the only candidate whose nomination had actually been completed.

CREDIT MEN TO APPEAR IN MOCK TRIAL

Case to Be Tried at the Hotel Westminster Expected to Solve Mooted Problem

A mock trial, having practically all the legal aspects of an actual trial, will be staged at the Hotel Westminster tonight at 8:15 o'clock by the Retail Credit Men's Association.

The case is one brought by "The Emporium, Inc.," against John Abbott Dorbel for $720 worth of goods bought by Dorbel's wife. Dorbel declares that a hat bought by his wife is unsatisfactory, that the talking machine she bought is not a necessity, that the set of books is for a present, and he is, therefore, not responsible, and that he will not pay for the fur coat, as he gave her the money with which to purchase it.

The decision will be rendered after due consideration of the legal aspects by "Judge" John Boyle O'Hare. It is expected to be of value to retailers in demonstrating just how far a man is legally responsible for purchases made by his wife.

Arthur F. Breed and Burt E. Holland are attorneys for the plaintiff and William J. Kenny is attorney for the defendant. D. O. Colville is the "clerk of court," and Michael J. McDonough is the "court officer."

MAN FLOURISHES GUN IN OFFICE OF DOCTOR

Physician Persuades Patient to Give Up Revolver Then Calls Police

Charged with carrying a loaded revolver into the office of Dr. John Dunphy, nerve specialist, at No. 3 Tremont row, Frederick Siebe, twenty-nine years old, a woodsman, believed to live in Attleboro, was arrested by Patrolman Paul Crowley of the City Hall avenue station.

According to the patrolman, Siebe entered the doctor's office and, flourishing the weapon, said: "I am being haunted by 500 devils, but will get some of them."

Dr. Dunphy persuaded the man to give him the gun and then signalled for the officer. Examination showed that the revolver contained five shells, three of which were loaded.

According to the doctor, Siebe visited the office last Friday and complained that he was unable to sleep. Siebe told the police at Station 2 that he had carried the gun for two years and had no intention of shooting anyone.

Gas, Indigestion, Stomach Misery —"Diapepsin"

"Pape's Diapepsin" "really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous—and the joy is its harmlessness. A large sixty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin is worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach turning the day or night. It's the most efficient antiacid and stomach regulator in the world.—Advertisement.

ASSOCIATION OF MERCHANTS TO BE A POWER

Members at State Meeting Hear of Progress Made by New Organization

Massachusetts Retail Merchants' Association held its annual meeting in Young's Hotel, with Attorney-General J. Weston Allen as the principal speaker.

Allen defended his course in moving for the disbarring of certain lawyers and the removal of certain District Attorneys. He said that he was proud of the fact that he was mobbed yesterday by the Suffolk County bar and proud of the enemies he had made.

The Attorney-General said that the general tone of public officeholders was high in Massachusetts, higher than in any other State in the Union.

President Charles C. Ferris presided. He alluded to the many achievements of the association which has been in existence less than a year. President Ferris declared that notable progress in the way of tax revision had been made and that other movements were in progress within the association which would make it a power.

George W. Coleman, dean of Roger W. Babson's Institute, spoke on "The New Order of Business." Winslow Weatherbee, secretary, spoke briefly on what he had been accomplished by the retailers' association.

TRANSIT LINES GAIN 4000 NEW PATRONS DAILY

Big Increase in Strap-Hangers Reported by New York City Experts

By Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 16—Four thousand more passengers rode in New York subway trains, trolleys and "L's" today than were carried yesterday. Tomorrow there will be another increase of 4,000. This 4,000 a day growth in traffic has been going on for several months, according to figures prepared for submission today to the State Transit Commission by experts.

DO WOMEN REASON? WE BELIEVE SO. HENCE MR. RADCLIFFE'S STORY BELOW:

Washing Windows On One Side Only— Is Wasted Effort. How About Your Face?

By VERNON RADCLIFFE

YOU may polish the outside of your window-panes until they flash in the sunlight but if the inside remains grimy all the work goes for nothing! This is exactly the case with your skin, Madame.

The flesh under your skin is the foundation of facial beauty. If your cheek sags your skin will sag with it—if the flesh of your under neck becomes flabby your skin will not cause it to retain a beautiful contour.

Beauty of Contour and Complexion Is Your Birthright

The muscles and flesh which give shape to your face and your skin as well, are kept sound and healthy through millions of pores which allow impurities to escape and enable the life-giving oxygen to reach the blood.

When the dust and grime of modern life clog these minute openings through which your body breathes, poisonous impurities are bottled up under your skin. The facial muscles weaken, the flesh sags, the skin becomes sallow and you are forced to resort to artificial coloring to produce the effect of beauty which is naturally yours!

Old Treatments Fail

Unscientific, old-fashioned massage has made more old women than age. To parboil your skin with hot water or steam, and knead and maul the muscles of your face is bound to be injurious. Moreover, massaging does not remove dirt, foreign substances and impurities from the place where they do the real damage—down below the surface of the skin. Your beauty specialist will tell you so.

Mineralava, Nature's Beauty Clay, originated by Mrs. M. G. Scott and perfected by her through twenty-three years of scientific research and experiment, accomplishes two important results—it tightens sagging muscles and it withdraws impurities from the pores.

Mineralava—Cold Water—Face Finish

Mineralava Beauty Clay is daintily applied with a brush in a semi-liquid form, to the face and neck.

As it dries into a light fragrant mask, it contracts. Its medicinal ingredients penetrate the depths of the pores. You feel it withdraw the impurities. You feel the cleansing, purifying blood tingle through each tiny vein. You feel wrinkles smooth out and flabby skin becomes tight.

Immediately, a blooming youthfulness glows and radiates from the cheeks. Mineralava Face Finish is a necessary skin food and tonic, acts as a mild bleach and forms a perfect base for your face powder. You apply it at the proper time, after the pores are cleansed.

Answers Modern Needs

Mineralava Beauty Clay is the one way to a good complexion and a smooth, firm skin—the best way—so startling, so revolutionary in idea, so different from any treatment that you have known, that you cannot afford not to know it—to try it.

Lasting Beauty of Complexion

Continue this treatment regularly twice a week and we guarantee, whether you are sixteen or sixty, a complexion of enduring freshness—a smooth, firm skin, beauty and youthfulness of contour, the radiant color of healthy childhood, and the defeat of such dread enemies of beauty as blackheads, pimples, enlarged pores, oily or dry skin, and wrinkles.

Ask for Mineralava TO-DAY

Go to your druggist or department store to-day and ask for the two bottles—Mineralava Beauty Clay (sufficient for two or three months) and Mineralava Face Finish (sufficient for six to eight months). If your druggist or department store is not yet supplied, fill out the coupon below to Mrs. Scott. You may try Mineralava Beauty Clay at once by enclosing 25c with the coupon for a demonstration tube of two full treatments.

So sure is Mr. Vivaudou that two trials will make you as enthusiastic as all others who have tried it, that he personally urges you to mail 25c for two full treatments. Thousands have sent us the coupon, and become users—sign yours and send it now.

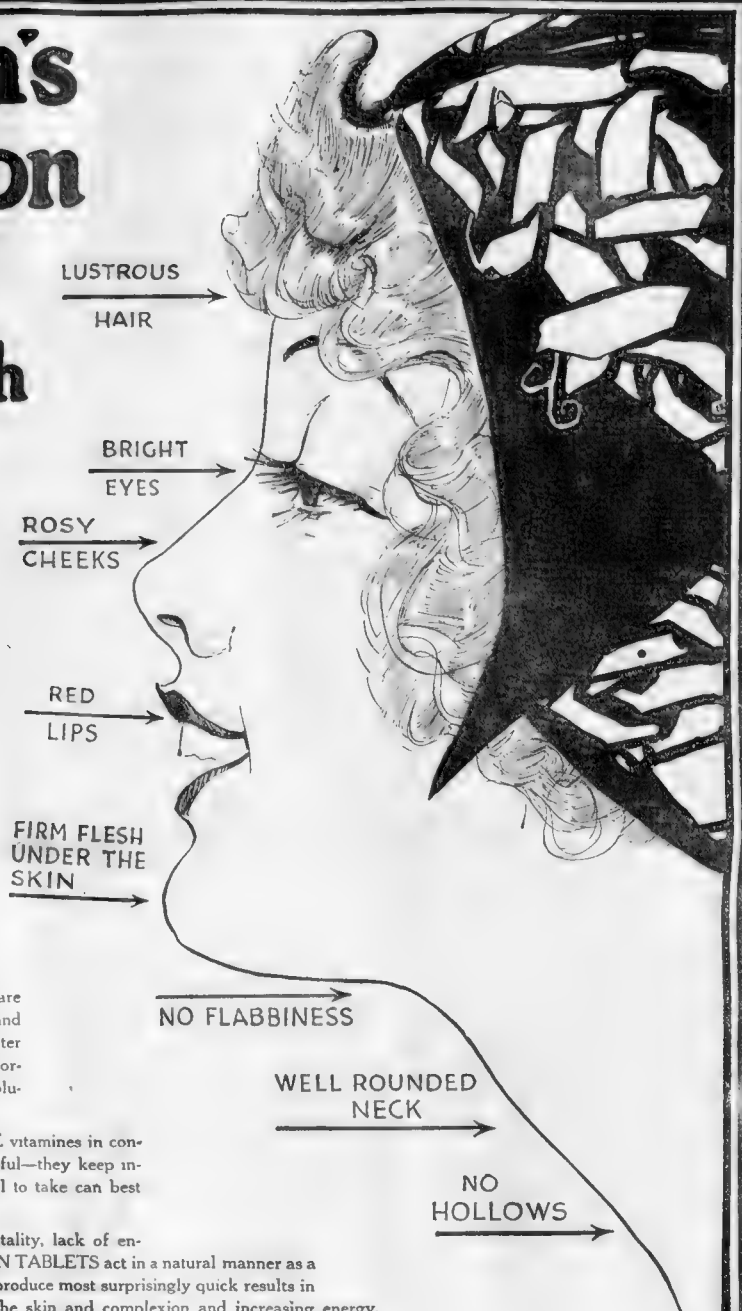
Take Mastin's Yeast Vitamon Tablets for Radiant Health and Youthful Beauty—



Science Shows Just Why It Is Now Such a Simple, Easy Matter to Have a Fresh, Clear Complexion, Firm Flesh, Healthy Energy and a Graceful Well-Rounded Figure

Every woman who has heard of the wondrous health and beauty making power of vitamines now has the opportunity of finding out for herself just what truly amazing results she may obtain by getting all the three equally important vitamines concentrated and combined in the convenient and easy-to-take form known as MASTIN'S YEAST VITAMON TABLETS.

Vitamines are wonderful life-giving, health-building elements contained in many raw foods, but they are often lost in the process of cooking before the foods ever reach you. There are three classes of vitamines and ALL THREE are regarded by scientific authorities as necessary for perfect health, vigor and proper physical development. Yeast is rich in one class of vitamines (Water Soluble B). But there are two other known vitamines—Fat Soluble A, normally present in raw milk, cod-liver oil and certain plants—and Water Soluble C, found to be in certain fruits and vegetables.

MASTIN'S YEAST VITAMON TABLETS containing ALL THREE vitamines in concentrated form, will not upset the stomach, they are in no way distasteful—they keep indefinitely and millions of users who find them pleasant and economical to take can best attest to their remarkable health-giving and beauty-making value.

For loss of weight, under-development, poor complexion, lowered vitality, lack of energy, improper digestion and elimination, MASTIN'S YEAST VITAMON TABLETS act in a natural manner as a general conditioner and up-builder for the whole system. They usually produce most surprisingly quick results in helping to put on firm flesh where it is needed, clearing and beautifying the skin and complexion and increasing energy.

Be sure to remember this name:

MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS

"Lohengrin" Well Sung by the Boston Society of Singers

"Lohengrin" is the opera being presented by the Boston Society of Singers at the Arlington this week. This great work by the late Richard Wagner would seem to be a bit beyond the modest resources of the company at the old Castle Square, and it's a pleasure to relate that the stab the Boston Society takes at Wagner is quite effective.

They have an excellent orchestra at the Arlington and it is reported to have been augmented for the occasion. If you had ever heard the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra, one hundred strong, perform the ponderous score, you would probably not be satisfied with a band of thirty men or so, nevertheless they played well and the audience liked it.

The Boston society has the distinction of being the first to play a Wagner opera in Boston since the war. They beat the San Carlo company by about five days, since it is to be given at the Boston Opera House on Saturday.

The austere knight Lohengrin was sung by Nino Arimondi, who is a big man and looked very well in armor. Florence Hermann as Elsa, brought a beautiful soprano to the role. Stella de Mevio, a good contralto indeed, played Ortrud, and Robert Henry made a fair job of Telramund, the bad baritone. Herbert Waterous, as King Henry, was singing one of his best parts. The choruses would have been better if there had been more voices, but never forget the very popular prices.

GOLDWYN SPENT $800,000 ON 'THEODORA'

Gigantic Production Filmed in Italy as America Proved Inadequate

"It would be impossible to produce in America a picture of the type of "Theodora," declared Samuel Goldwyn yesterday, discussing the coming to the Shubert Theatre of the sensational and spectacular Greek film which his company is presenting.

"We have not the facilities, the architectural genius, or the artist who could imagine and reproduce such amazing restorations of Grecian sanitive art," he said. "These buildings are of a period which is neither Roman or Oriental. The sixth century had an architecture all its own and is the least known and most difficult to reproduce of any."

SPENT SIX WEEKS IN ROME.

Mr. Goldwyn went to Italy and spent nearly six weeks in Rome, visiting the ruins of many of ancient buildings and wonderful triumphs of oriental architecture which had been erected on the coast of the Lake of Albano, near Rome.

"I visited the scene of this picture every morning for nearly six weeks," said Mr. Goldwyn. "I saw this picture made, bit by bit. I saw and talked with Brasini, the famous architect of the Vatican, who was loaned for this work, having a special order from His Holiness the Pope. It is the first time Brasini has ever done any architectural work outside of the Vatican.

"I saw troops of the Italian cavalry, ordered by the War Department of the Italian government, sent to this miniature site of the screen in order to preserve order among the thousands of people employed as extras.

"I saw the great amphitheatre which had been erected as an accurate reproduction of the one in Constantinople, and I saw this amphitheatre actually crowded with 25,000 people the day they turned the lions loose in order to get the great big spectacular effect which is one of the most thrilling events I have ever seen on the screen.

"The moving picture operators were in cages, and men with guns were in the background ready to shoot any lions in case they escaped from their trainers.

BROUGHT TO AMERICA.

"I was so impressed with the wonderful work of Ambrosio as a director, that I said to him the third day 'We must handle this picture in America. It is the greatest thing I have ever seen attempted and I know you will finish it so that it will be a triumph.'

"The picture in its final state, but with no titles except the Italian dialogue, was finally shipped to this country. The negative went to our studios in California and for several months of the hardest kind of work to assemble this picture, revise it with English titles and phases, prepare it for the American public.

"It was originally over 20,000 feet in length, and we had to cut this down to ten reels. It cost $1,000,000 to produce this picture, which at the old rate of exchange would be $1,000,000, and represents an investment of $800,000 in American money."

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

THE chance notice in a New York paper that a legitimate production at a Broadway theatre played to but $70 on the second night of its run, recalls the interesting remark made the other day by the publicity agent of the Globe Theatre here in town.

"The Three Musketeers," he told me, played to a thousand dollar house on the first performance at that theatre. This was on a Sunday and after an eight weeks' run at the beautiful Theatre—and it's still going strong. What more can a producer or a theatre manager ask?

While the motion pictures can never in any way take the place of the spoken drama, as many still claim they will do, they can certainly "take it a run for its box office receipts" when they are as well made up as was "Dope."

THEY WANT TO KNOW!

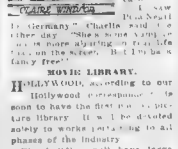
AN almost unprecedented thing occurred at the Park Theatre this week when a feature film was held over for a second week. This has been known to happen with stage productions, when they draw more extensively than was expected, but it's never been looked for in the three-week runs.

The Boston fans responded, so nobly to the Warren Brothers' production, "Why Girls Leave Home," that the theatre management kept it over.

HOLLYWOOD NEWS.

THE great news of the day on the West Coast is, of course, the home-coming of Charlie Chaplin. He came home with a declaration from the French Society des Beaux Arts, in which some of the latest work of Rodin and following their pose of British brogans for his famous feet, a new cane, and four dozen "little girls" colored silk handkerchiefs. It was all on the wings of his manager, or maybe it was a valet.

Claire Windsor, leading woman in the Lois Weber films, met him at the station, thereby prompting the producers to get on contracts for the actress. She has just signed a Mexican picture to begin her next week, so she doesn't care.



CLAIRE WINDSOR

It was Pola Negri in Germany," Charlie said the other day. "She's some vamp, and more appealing off the screen than on the screen. But I'm back in family free!"

MOVIE LIBRARY.

HOLLYWOOD, according to our Hollywood correspondent, is soon to have the first motion picture library. It will be devoted solely to works bearing on all phases of the industry.

The building will have large reading and reference rooms and offices for the association that will publish books, magazines, directories and encyclopedias relating to the motion. Prof. the list of directors, Roy Mandor, Frederick Palmer, H. E. Peter, R. M. Warmbath and others, it would seem to be guided fairly by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

CHARLES RAY ON WAY.

THE itinerary of Charlie Ray's visit East seems at first to ignore Boston altogether. He plans call for a stop at Chicago, then to Niagara Falls and Buffalo then to New York and later to Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore.

Later information however assures us that not only will he visit the Hub, but that he will shoot scenes for his next picture here. They are: Miss Ray, accompanying Director Malcolm St. Clair, and Miss Lee, Richard Wayne, Albert A. Kaufman, and his camera man, George Rizard.

CAMERA CLICKS.

THE new Brentwood Film production, "The Man Who Won't Lie" promises some real distinctly new in the line of comedy. Mary Miles Minter is to do some real acting in the picture, playing some who wants to be a movie actress. Orrin D. Noble is now in the cast, to William V. Mong and Mary Warde.

KATHERINE MacDONALD has finished work on her South Sea Island picture, "The Head Hunter." Miss MacDonald is pleased with it, as it was her first work in Hawaii, the "Miracle Man" and the "Man Beneath." Miss Lee, Tom and Christine Mayo, Harold Lloyd, also some Mary Pickford stars, were in Honolulu in cooperation with the Pacific fleet.

TWO FOXES KILLED AT WINCHENDON MEET

Winchendon, Nov. 16.—Two more foxes were killed on the second day of the seventh annual hunt of the New England Fox Hunters Club in the town. This brings the total for the season up to 20. Cougney of Maynard, Mass., killed the first fox and won the day's pool, and Dr. Davis of Woonsocket, R. I., landed the second. Both "kills" were made in the vicinity of South Ashburnham and were scored after hard and exciting runs. Edward L. Tarbell of Pepperell judged a fox on a long shot.

$40,000 SUITS FOLLOW TAUNTON AUTO CASE

Taunton, Nov. 16.—Forty thousand dollars is sought in suits entered here against Charles M. Hill of Quincy, as the outgrowth of a collision between a motor truck said to have been owned by Hill and an automobile of Sophie P. Tolon of Providence, at Raynham, Sept. 5.

Samuel Tolon, of Providence claims $10,000 for personal injuries and for damage to his car. Mary A. Upton seeks $10,000 for personal injuries. Doris A. and Paul J. Upton, minors, sue for $5,000 each.

Sins of diet often result in pimples and boils

A familiar fresh food corrects their basic cause

"THE causes of pimples and blackheads (acne) are always found in lowered vitality, very commonly associated with constipation and digestive disorders," says one skin specialist, and he further says that "the repeated occurrence of boils should always be looked upon as an indication of lowered vitality."

Scientists now know that the real cause of the trouble may be some "sin of diet."

It is now generally acknowledged that the lack of one food factor called vitamine is largely responsible for the lowered vitality that so often brings skin disorders and blemishes.

Something to correct the basic cause of these complaints is clearly needed. Scientists have discovered it in the familiar little cake of Fleischmann's Yeast, for yeast is the richest known source of the food factor essential to perfect digestion.

Physicians and hospitals are therefore prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast as an addition to the diet. It yields remarkable results in the treatment of boils and acne so often due to sins of diet.

Fleischmann's Yeast is a highly digestible fresh food. Have it on the table at home and on your desk at the office. You will like its fresh, distinctive flavor, and the clean wholesome taste it leaves in your mouth. Eat from 2 to 3 cakes a day just plain or on crackers or bread. Within two weeks you should notice an improvement. Obstinate cases may require two or three weeks longer. If troubled with gas, dissolve the yeast first in half a cup of very hot water. This does not affect the efficacy of the yeast. Get Fleischmann's Yeast fresh daily from your grocer.

Send 4c in stamps for the booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." So many inquiries are coming in daily for this booklet that it is necessary to make this nominal charge to cover cost of handling and mailing. Address THE FLEISCHMANN COMPANY, 701 Washington Street, New York City.

The need for scientifically tested yeast

Fresh yeast has been proved by recent scientific tests to be a valuable food for correcting run-down condition, constipation, indigestion and certain skin disorders. These original tests were all made with Fleischmann's Yeast. Beware of untested yeast-vitamine preparations that contain drugs or other mixtures. Fleischmann's Yeast (fresh) is a pure food, rich in vitamine, in which it measures up to the high standards set by laboratories and hospitals. The familiar tin-foil package with the yellow label is the only form in which Fleischmann's Yeast for Health is sold.

Balfour speaks intelligently for England, with merchant ships, large and visible, dotting the ocean everywhere, when he denounces the ten thousand miles-radius submarine that would "be, to those ships, like a wolf to a flock of sheep.

The submarine menaces the worlds peace, a so the flying machine than can be released out at sea from the hold of a ship, to strike coast cities in the night.

But war is based on treachery, secrecy, brutality and lying. How will you keep a nation that is planning war from building the most effective war machinery?

Why not admit that while the world remains barbarous, comparative safety is to be found only in permitting intelligent nations, least inclined to war, to maintain such power as will compel the respect of those murderously inclined?

When early white explorers went through Africa they were respected and safe because THEY had the guns. The native knelt down and prayed to them, begging "Don't shoot me."

because he belonged to it. One could not pass from one book of mind to the other, he thought, without grave risks and dangers. It is easier to disarm confidence than to create responsibility.

I was reminded of that by conversation the other day by a remark made by a fellow journalist in Washington.

"A Chinese will tell you that he thinks—like an American—but a Japanese always feels like an American when he is let on accredited duty.

Now this is very interesting and probably a very fundamental proposition. This difference in spirit between the Japanese and a very different minimum of fear the two great and unseen powers that overshadow them. Japan is a permanent and effective thing from its organization and its people. Behind the Japanese people lie Russia and China, and Russia is in chaos and China is in decay.

Unless the Japanese mould these two vast countries into great and powerful German empires they have nothing to fear from the "immense undeveloped territories" of the two Asiatic powers. Japan is overcrowded already for the two great powers by the Japanese.

Need for Perfectly Plain Statements

The Japanese are likely to think the Atlantic governments are more free to decide than they really are, and that what they say is more conclusive than it really is; and the Americans are apt to think that Japan is more free to act than it really is. Japan is not free to act as it pleases. Its people in its hand like a nervous horse. It has to be very careful and deliberate in every statement concerning the governments of the ex-enemy Powers. It has to appeal to and to work upon the public opinion of the world largely through newspapers and through Britain or America. At present time, and in the near future, Japan is tied up and afraid of isolation.

So far as Britain is still a power it is mainly as the ally of Japan. Japan is afraid to go to war with the United States because it would be at war with the British Empire, and Britain is afraid to go to war with Japan because it would be at war with the United States. Britain is also afraid to have our Japanese government and people think because of this belief in trust in the private assurances and general attitude of preferences in high places for more than they are justified in doing.

The British democracy is very like the American democracy in its ability to keep watching what is happening overseas, but it is provincial in domestic questions and things that are near to it.

SATURDAY PROMISES TO FURNISH SEVERAL RUGGED GAMES

By CHARLES E. PARKER

Although only two of the five undefeated grid elevens of the East will risk their reputations on Saturday afternoon, that day, in football, promises to furnish a number of ruggedly-contested, evenly matched games.

The undefeated elevens scheduled to perform are Yale, which meets Harvard in the fortieth battle of their time-honored series, and Lafayette, whose team faces Lehigh in another of the long-standing annuals of the sport.

But in the Boston College-Georgetown game at Braves Field those who are denied entrance to the Stadium are offered excellent entertainment, and Gothamites who flock to the Polo Grounds for Dartmouth-Syracuse battle are not apt to find the afternoon wasted.

Then there are the Brown-Colgate meeting at Providence, the New Hampshire-Holy Cross setto at Haverhill, the Springfield-Fordham contest at Springfield, the West Virginia-Rutgers fray at Middletown, the Tufts-Aggie clash at Amherst and the Rutgers-West Virginia engagement at New Brunswick as further attractions for eastern fandom.

For middle westerners the Chicago-Wisconsin and Ohio State-Illinois clashes promise the high [illegible] of the Pacific Coast, California [illegible] engagement with Leland Stanford looms as the outstanding attraction, while in the South the Centre-Washington & Lee battle should furnish a quota of thrills, as will also the Johns Hopkins-St. John's game, on which the state championship of Maryland will be decided.

The Brown-Colgate game involving Georgetown and Boston College has assumed an entirely altered aspect since the happenings of last Saturday. Many up to that time had figured Coach Exendine's team the game winners of the Jesuit college title and a rival for top honors in eastern football.

But when Georgia Tech clearly demonstrated that Georgetown can be defeated, the outlook changed considerably. Then came the announcement that one or two of B. C.'s wounded regulars had fully recovered and would resume play against Georgetown, and the game promptly assumed proportions of a nip and tuck battle between the local and the Washington teams, with Georgetown the favorite but with Coach Cavanaugh's team conceded a real chance of winning.

Dartmouth-Syracuse games usually have been strenuous affairs, and the fact that neither eleven has made an impressive record this season does not mean the game will be less attractive, for each is known to possess excellent material, and if this material starts playing up to its possibilities the game may prove the best of the series of spectacular contests that have entertained Polo Grounds gatherings this Fall.

The Syracuse team is the most powerful outfit in the East and would weigh Dartmouth's several pounds to pound, but the Green vanquished which performed so poorly against Cornell, has been shifted around and given real instruction in the line play, and if it performs as it did against Pennsylvania the weight disparity should not figure.

Dartmouth is somewhat better equipped in backfield men with Captain Robertson, one of the greatest all-round players of the year, [illegible] in good condition, and Chick Burack, his running mate, fully aware of the [illegible] Green [illegible] until he passes the line of scrimmage.

In the Pennsylvania game Robertson assumed, and with remarkable success, the dual role of offensive halfback and defensive tackle, and [illegible] as he passes, punts, drop-kicks and carries the ball on the attack, and still is able to play a defensive tackle position in excellent style when the opposing team has the ball, he certainly is giving the Green his utmost and the Green's opponents lots of trouble.

Dartmouth will rule a slight favorite in this contest, but despite the two defeats appearing on Syracuse's record Chick Reeban's team may succeed in upsetting Dartmouth's plans.

Brown's promising but rather unfortunate team is expected to take the measure of Colgate in the Andrews' Field clash. Just why the Bruins have not made a more impressive record this season is one of football's puzzles, for, in Shurtleff, Brown possesses one of the great centres of the year; in Gullia a powerful tackle; [illegible] Barrett, a strong, heavy guard; and it has backfield men of real ability.

The latter department will be considerably improved for Saturday's contest through the return to playing condition of Marshall, the former Peddie Institute fullback, and an accomplished line smasher, interference maker and kicker.

Whether Holy Cross will get going in the form it displayed against Harvard is the question that puzzles those who seek to estimate the outcome of its game with the able New Hampshire eleven.

The Purple eleven started the season on a winning note, but was [illegible] by Georgetown and Boston College, and was [illegible] to [illegible] through a long [illegible] season. Many of the [illegible] who [illegible] as the result of strenuous football campaigns through [illegible] months, and home work [illegible] to crack under the strain of the football season. The "cracking" came in the Georgetown game.

Since that time Coe O'Donnell's army has ranged in but one fairly easy game, and it is believed by many that the virtual layoff of three weeks will have served as a great help to the Worcesterites. And, when Holy Cross is "right" it is capable of causing trouble for the best of them.

Percy Wendell's Williams team, which has enjoyed a most successful season [illegible] favorite in the final game of the "Little Three" series in which its opponent is Wesleyan.

Wesleyan sprung a surprise two weeks ago when it tied Amherst, and an [illegible] game [illegible] afforded by its mowing down "Mouse" Kmiecherm's Lehigh gut eleven. Williams should have less trouble in annexing the Wesleyan contest.

The outcome of the Springfield-Fordham game should depend largely on Fordham's ability to check forward passes. Fordham accuses saw Cornell at times [illegible] college eleven's aerials as well as its cross-attack, and by [illegible] its defence after that employed by Dobie's unbeaten team. Fordham may prove equally successful.

Another New England annual of more recent origin, the Tufts-Massachusetts Aggie game, is not the least promising contest of the day. Tufts, whose team has played much better than its record might indicate, rules the favorite in this game, but the Aggies are sufficiently strong to make a battle of it, and the game may furnish the fight that has marked the yearly meetings of these two teams.

RETAIL STORES' BOWLERS GET CUP

Boston American Presents Beautiful Trophy to Team Captains of League

At a meeting of the captains of the Boston Retail Stores' Bowling League the Boston American presented the league with a beautiful sterling silver trophy which will be contested for annually until one of the teams wins it three times.

This paper appreciates the progress that is being made among Boston's leading retail stores in promoting amateur athletics and takes this means to continue interest, enthusiasm and support.

The trophy is mounted on a mahogany base and is twenty inches high and fourteen inches wide. It is of plain design, but the attractive style and skilled workmanship in the engraving lend beauty and distinction to it.

Outside of the mere possession of the cup by the winning team for the year, the engraving tells its own message as a boon to bowli g among the stores. The spread eagle running head of the Boston American is engraved at the top of the trophy with the following inscription: "Presented by Boston American to the Boston Retail Stores' Bowling League, to be competed for annually and become the property of the first store winning three annual series."

This year sixteen teams entered the lists, representing practically every branch of retail merchandising in the city. The league was completed last year with twelve teams. This year's organization is the largest in the city.

J. J. Cremmen of the Boston American presented the trophy to George W. Callahan, president of the league, who accepted it on behalf of the league. His speech of acceptance was very fitting.

Four Bowling Matches in Retail Stores League

Four matches were scheduled in the Retail Stores Bowling League, but because of some misunderstanding, A. G. Spalding & Bros. did not meet Thayer McNeil.

Kennedys defeated A. Shuman Co. four points, R. H. White defeated Butler Co. four points, and C. F. Hovey defeated Shepard Stores 3 to 1.

The high single was made by Holt of McNeil, with 129. Thayer McNeil, with 486 and 1,413, had the high single string and high team total marks.

Mulready, with 324, had the highest individual three-string total.

The matches were rolled on the Hawley street alleys.

GEORGETOWN HAS BEST TEAM AGAINST B. C.

All reports from Georgetown indicate that Coach Exendine will present the strongest eleven that has represented the Senators in years against Coach Cavanaugh's team when these two Jesuit colleges will clash on football honors Saturday on Braves Field.

As far as can be judged by a comparison of records, Georgetown has a team superior to Boston College. The line is heavier and more experienced, while the backfield can hit opposing lines with a speed and force that has toppled all but one of the Georgetown opponents.

Line and backfield material are plentiful in the Georgetown camp, there being three or four men for each position little inferior to the regular players. In this respect, the Hilltoppers have the advantage Coach Cavanaugh had hard work, despite the large number of candidates, to find sufficient material for two teams. Besides, Georgetown can call on regulars to displace the first team, while Cavanaugh must rely on untried first year men.

A few weeks back, the most ardent B. C. rooter would not concede Boston College a chance against Georgetown. When Cavanaugh's machine was hit by the Detroit Stevens, it looked as though it would take a season to repair it. The necessary repairs were soon made, however, and the Maroon and Gold team has shown a steady improvement in form, until now when it stands a good chance of taking the measure of Georgetown and Holy Cross.

Quarterback Donnellan has been practicing punting for the last week and a half from behind the line of scrimmage. He has developed more [illegible] and [illegible] in [illegible] his kicks against an [illegible] line, [illegible] that average a good 50 yards.

Kicking will play an important part in Saturday's game, as any [illegible] on the part of Boston College in this department will in all probability mean defeat. Flavin, who will do the kicking for the Georgetown visitors, has a remarkable record in punting, one of his long [illegible] going for 110 yards.

PERE MARQUETTE GETS REVENGE FOR DEFEAT

Twenty husky football players and fifty or more royal rooters, who travelled from Joliet and Mo. went back with a rather "blue" feeling after being soundly trounced by the Pere Marquette Council, Knights of Columbus, before 15,000 football fans at the Chicago Coliseum. CORNELL TRIES PLAYS TO USE AGAINST PENN

Ithaca, Nov. 16.—The Cornell team braved a wet and sloppy field for what Coach Dobie considered an imperative need for outdoor practice. The squad abandoned the regular varsity gridiron for better footing on Upper Alumni Field and for about an hour worked out some of the plays to be used in the Penn game.

Kaw, Carey, Hanson and Pfann did a good deal of punting and drop kicking. The entire varsity team was in the line-up.

THIS is the anniversary of the opening of the Suez Canal, in 1869. This great engineering feat led De Lesseps, its engineer, to try to cut the Panama Isthmus, but he failed. The Suez shortens the trip to Asia from Europe thousands of miles.

GET-RICH-QUICK WALLINGFORD

A Delightful Serial of Adventure, Intrigue and the Triumph of Love Over Dishonesty

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Hyrum Dane, known as "Blackie," a well-to-do, good looking plausible young man, arrives in the sleepy little town of Battlesburg, Iowa, says to the future, the best town, and proceeds to ingratiate himself with the citizens. He soon falls in love with Dorothea West, but he does not talk about the nature of his business. He does, however, interest even the tailor of the town, and Clyde Starling, editor of The Blade prints an editorial endorsing Mr. Dane's views, suggesting that there are few men who put the town to Peaceful ale. This angers Colonel Battles, the town boss of Battlesburg, and there is a lot of discussion. Wallingford arrives after Dane has learned that Eddie Lamb, the hotel clerk, is trusted in the bank. Dane's plotter proceeds to win over Colonel Battles, the town's most influential citizen, and incidentally about the beauty of Hannie Jasper, the hotel steno.

("Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" is a Cosmopolitan Production based on some of the famous Wallingford stories and the famous play by George M. Cohan, directed by Frank Borzage and released as a Paramount Picture.)

"I AM not a man of promises, but I think I can say without exaggeration that I will be responsible for a new era of prosperity in Battlesburg. I am going to look around, and if I am satisfied that the prospects are as favorable as Mr. Dane has painted it, I'll take the money I have made and put it into whatever line of business I can find that will be of the greatest benefit to the town."

J. Rufus Wallingford turned to his friend with a smile and nodded his head slightly. Mr. Daw knew what the admiring Harkins had penned: "Mr. Wallingford rises to no modesty and unobtrusively asking us for our money he brings us the golden opportunity which will no doubt make Battlesburg a metropolis of the Middle West, a centre of industry. He is a gentleman of massive resources, magnificent plans and vast accomplishments. Hail to you, J. Rufus Wallingford."

The subject of this extravagant praise paused to emit a long whistle. "Can you beat these boobs, Blackie? Isn't it rich? P. T. Barnum was right only he was a couple of centuries——"

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

Here's a timely and stimulating thought from George Edward Smith, who won his spurs as a super-salesman and is now president of one of the large typewriting companies:

"Birds are now back again in the business bushes and can be found if you beat the flush hard enough.

"There have been times when I hesitated to drive our selling force because I knew mighty few bushes would yield up birds no matter how thoroughly the bushes were beaten, for the sufficient reason that no birds were in most of them.

"Now the birds are there and can be found by going after them properly."

* * *

Knowing that the impossible was neither demanded nor expected of them when business was dead, the large sales forces are keyed under President Smith are now responsive to his exhortation to go after and secure business. Orders are being received in increased volume.

* * *

How to ginger up sales forces is an eternal problem. Large profits in business must come from selling. It will interest many to learn how this forceful executive has gone about dispelling the dull days and overtook so many sales forces in the post distant past.

Here are extracts from one of a series of letters sent by President Smith to sales-managers, to be initialled in prodding the men into quickened, redoubled activity:

"The business of the United States is in better condition than it has been at any time since the war—I mean fundamentally. There is no wild prosperity, built up on a foundation that was faulty, and when the superstructure has fallen to earth down to the bottom in order to rebuild right. That has taken place. We now have too much foundation, if anything. Frozen credits have been liquidated; losses have been written off; high-priced inventories have been moved; expansion has been discontinued. The organizations that were top-heavy—too heavy for the markets they served—have been cut down. There is freer money, as is evidenced by the large gold reserves and the exceptionally low discount rate of 4½ per cent., not seen before in quite a few years.

"Notwithstanding this, there is apathy. The average man's mind is confused. He does not look at fundamentals. He looks at the symptoms that appear around him, and which for interpretation is a confused way as evidence that business is still in poor condition, and that the waiting or marking-time policy is best.

"Apathy is a hard thing to overcome, and it is contagious. It is a state of mind that salesmen get themselves into very easily as a reaction from the attitude of their customers, and I think you will discover that there is a certain amount of apathy in this organization that has got to be taken out by strong leadership.

* * *

"If any man does not know where he is going, tell him. Tell him in such words as to leave no doubt. I would rather have a poor man working definitely to a goal and confident of his accomplishment than a good man running around in circles in doubt as to where he is eventually going to end up.

"This apathy can be cut through, just as a fog can, by some fellow who knows that there is a smooth road on the other side and that it is time to go ahead.

* * *

"There is more reason for big sales now than there has been in two years. These sales are going to come gradually to some and not to some offices, but with pretty strong increase to those people who know that if they are after the business the business is there, and that the only thing the matter with them is a little apathy that is covering up a whole lot of good orders."

* * *

Is that not true of many of us. First, the war boom made it so easy to get orders that little or no effort had to be extended by sales forces. This, naturally, tended to breed laziness. Then when conditions flopped to the other extreme, a great many salesmen simply concluded that there was no use trying to get orders as none were to be had. Thus inactivity and indifference were again fostered.

* * *

Is it not true, however, that birds are again in the bushes and that they will be bagged by those who lose no time in faring forth to beat the bushes with the most strenuous vigor and consummate intelligence.

Stocks Strong in New York at Noon; Call Money Loans at 4½%; Sterling Up

OIL AND RAIL SHARES ARE LEADERS

Market Narrow During Forenoon; Gains Rule Small; Trading Is Active

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, but below the highest level of the morning. As a rule price changes were small. A second hour feature was the decline of American Sumatra, it receding more than two points to its lowest since 1917. Trading was largely confined to a few groups, but was active. Morning transactions approximated 470,000 shares. Call money opened at 4½ per cent. Continental exchange rates were irregular, but demand sterling began with a fractional gain and was soon quoted at $3.97⅜, an advance of 1¾ cents and the high for six months.

Issues to advance the most included Mexican Petroleum, Pacific Oil, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, Lehigh Valley, Reading, Union Pacific, Atchison, Canadian Pacific, Famous Players, U. S. Realty, Industrial Alcohol, May Department Stores, Pierce Arrow preferred, Agricultural Chemical, Virginia-Carolina Chemical and Fisher Body preferred. Stromberg-Carburetor reversed its early new high for the year. These stocks were up from one to nearly two points. New York Air Brake dropped three.

UP AT THE OPENING.

Most stocks were up at the opening and although gains averaged small their generality gave the market a strong tone at the outset. Oils and rails were the most active issues in early trading and domestic specialties made the largest gains. Standard Oil of New Jersey climbed four points within an hour, while Standard Oil of California advanced one. Mexican Petroleum ranged from a fractional loss to more than a point gain. Royal Dutch began weak and stayed so. Coalers were the strongest rails. Equipments advanced little. Motors showed little change, but rubber shares were in demand with coppers. Tires seemed rather heavy. Steels were firm but not displayed much activity. Sugars showed slightly higher level. Industrial Alcohol moved up nearly two points and coolers mid-monthly and Haskell & Barker and Davison Chemical sold at new 1921 highs.

RAILS ARE FIRMER.

Railroad shares have shown a firmer tone recently. This is partly because of reports that they are earning more. Increased traffic is one of the signs of business expansion. The flurry in steels which resulted from disarmament proposals has subsided. The rising price for metal is causing quiet accumulation of the standard copper issues.

Increased demand for investment stocks is an aftermath of a broader bond market. The country has never had so much money to invest as now and good securities are being absorbed in such an extent that the floating supply is said to be small. Speculation continues to be very professional in character and the public is not expected to take a hand until a trade revival inspires the confidence required before people will risk money. The borrowing demand for stocks was fair yesterday. Industrials commanded 4 per cent. and rails 3 per cent, as a rule. American Sugar loaned at a premium of 1-64 of 1 per cent.

STABILITY COMES TO CHICAGO'S BUSINESS

Reaction Since Hughes' Speech, Though More Fluctuations Are Likely, Says Evans

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Business Delegate Hughes' slow the conference table another big thump, affairs seem likely to assume a more stable condition, though the gathering in Washington is likely to cause many fluctuations during the whole course of its career.

The infusion of Japanese ideas into the trade politic is not likely to be a sensitive, even though charged with orientalism, for all the incidentals will be constantly alert for something underneath.

Buyers and sellers of securities in this city appear to be getting back on the habit of mind prevailing before the conference assembled. But the crooks at the brokers' offices inclenate curiously that the actual outpouring of money, or even further selling of stocks from fear. The performance of Steels in certain issues are more than likely to have in view only the relatively big dividends for taxation purposes. The decline in prices Monday is commonly thought to be merely the slipping back of a market which had gone too high, accentuated by the action of the conference.

UP A POINT A DAY.

There is excellent buying here of stocks on which Chicago has joined in a rush for many months, especially local issues. One in particular, which has always been in line about doing anything, even declining, is moving up about a point a day, and has gone beyond the highest previous quotation for many months.

After all the key is the money market, once the trader accepts the fact that business is improving somewhat. Four per cent on call in New York today is a leader.

It is sometimes seems as if the directors of many corporations had forgotten that money is going at lower rates now than six months ago. One might cite New York Telephone offering an excellent security to yield over 6.70 per cent; Standard Gas Utilities to yield 8. Connecticut Light & Power to yield 7.50, and Public Service Corporation of New Jersey 7.30, while Standard Oil of New Jersey 6 per cent is asking funds in the United States on a basis of 8.10. These are only a few out of a long list. The habit of mind created by the war carries long with us.

NOW HAVE PEACE FEAR.

But in place of a war fear we now have a peace fear, for assured peace would mean loss to many, he scrapping of our warships and agreement not to build any new ones should logically have little effect on the manufacturers of warships and equipment, so small is that line of their work in comparison with the whole, also in increased value one day or six per cent.

As for permanent peace, if that should land itself on this earth all of a sudden, say a thousand years from now, which would be a sudden performance compared with length of time animals have been fighting, we really need not be anxious even in the wickedest part of a wicked heart. The decline in money is really a triumph of the Federal Reserve system or at least for the opinions and the ignorance of its officials.

It was in this city perhaps that the objection to the recent reductions to the Federal Reserve discount rate was strongest, but our bankers have been obliged to follow or probably they will have to go still farther after the turn of the year, unless business expands much more than now seems likely.

CHICAGO'S OBJECTIONS.

The logic of the Chicago objections was clear enough and too little understood in New York. That much liquidation remained to be achieved, and therefore was not to be relied on for making collateral beyond absolute necessities by making the rate for money lower.

It was also declared that the proposed lower rates were unjustifiable on the ground that the security offered to the lenders had not materially improved in quality. The bankers demonstrated their sincerity by refusing loans which have since been granted by co-operation representing the United States Government. "They are welcome to such loans," was the word of the bankers.

By MONITOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Stocks showed less activity and more irregularity Tuesday, with a fairly steady undertone in the forenoon and a reaction-ary tendency toward the close. Several points of weakness developed, and these operated to deter confident buying and encourage short selling. The action of the market was more or less of a puzzle in view of the optimism created by the favorable reports from the disarmament conference, and various explanations were offered. It was even suggested that a certain amount of selling had already made its appearance for the purpose of establishing income tax losses.

VARIOUS groups of stocks moved in response to special influences. The oils were reactionary and Royal Dutch was distinctly weak. Motor shares were inclined to sag, but it looked as if rubber and tire stocks had about discontinued the price reductions with the belated announcement that Goodrich had made its cuts and these issues were ready. The equipments generally made a good showing, although the pronounced strength of Baldwin, Lima, Locomotive and Pullman Co. was due to special causes.

STEELS showed a tendency toward recovery and Bethlehem closed at a small net gain. The coppers started off well, with most of the active issues higher in the forenoon, but Seneca was the only stock to maintain practically the full extent of its advance.

IN the investment division a continued good demand is reflected by the large turnover, although prices sagged somewhat in the afternoon.

SOME idea of the abundance of investment funds may be gained from the fact that the subscription books for the issue of the $50,000,000 of twenty-year, 5 per cent. refunding mortgage gold bonds, series A of the New York Telephone Company were opened at 10 o'clock at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. and immediately closed. The issue was several times over-subscribed. The bonds were offered at 97 and interest to yield over 6.25 per cent. A great deal of interest had been taken in the underwriting and bankers and bond dealers had been flooded with advance orders for the bonds.

THE American Telephone Company has raised the price of its stock under the employes' stock subscription plan from $100 a share to $105 a share, effective on December 1. It is said that since the plan was announced last May, about 40 per cent. of the employes of the company have availed themselves of the opportunity to become stockholders. The stock closed above 112, which is a new high feature for the last few years. The regular quarterly dividend of 2¼ per cent. is payable January 16 to stockholders of record December 20.

ACCORDING to C. H. Gifford, secretary of the Bridge Builders' Structural Society, orders for structural steel are equal to more than 50 per cent. of the capacity of the country's plants. Contracts placed during October amount to 97,800 tons or 54 per cent. of the plant capacity of the country. This is a gain of more than 11,000 tons over September orders.

FIRM TONE TO THE BOSTON MARKET

United Shoe Makes Good Gain; West End at 1921 High-est; Curb Weakens

After an irregular start the Boston list showed improvement and before the end of the morning gaine outnumbered declines. Utah Consolidated was more active than usual and also one of the weakest issues. It receded more than a point to a new low for the year. United Shoe advanced almost two points on a number of transactions, while Carson Hill gained more than one and was one of the leaders. Agricultural Chemical issues were more in evidence than usual, both common and preferred advancing more than two points. They were in New York, too. American Sugar preferred moved up to 83 during the forenoon. Boston & Maine receded a point, Calumet & Hecla dropped four and Swift & Co. 2. West End sold at its 1921 highest.

Fractional gains were made by Massachusetts Gas, United Fruit, West End, New River preferred, Atlas Tack, Pond Creek, Swift International, Waldorf, Utah Apex and New England Oil. Among stocks to sustain small losses were Island Creek, New Haven, International Cement, Libby and Edison.

The Curb market was quiet and after an irregular start developed a little weakness. The leaders were Boston & Montana and Eureka. At the end of the morning Boston & Montana was up 2 cents at 2½ cents, New Rilla 1 cent at 2½ cents and Arizona Tip Top half a cent at 3 cents, among declines were Eureka 4 cents at 4½ cents, Bagdad 1 cent at 3⅜ cents, Mutual 1 cent at 2⅜ cents, Ruby 3

CLERK IS TRAPPED IN BACK BAY BUILDING

A clerk employed by the Harcourt Bindery Company at No. 11 Harcourt street, Back Bay, was left marooned in the third floor of the company's building when the rest of the employes went home last evening. It was three hours later when the clerk, who did not reveal his name, called police headquarters. Police from the Back Bay station responded with a ladder, which was too short, and the officers went away.

Then clerk went inside the building and telephoned to nearly every employe in the place asking for aid, but no one could give it to him. Finally he called the building superintendent, who came to the rescue by means of working the fire escape. It was six hours before he finally reached the street.

URGE LOWELL INVESTORS TO SHUN FAKE STOCKS

Lowell, Nov. 16.—Because of numerous issues in "wild cat stocks," the Lowell Chamber of Commerce has decided to urge upon its members and all who come forward for investment suggestions that preference be given to liberty bonds or to bank savings. Lowell people have been "stung" many times within the past few years, according to the statement, who seem to have been particularly susceptible to the arguments of smooth talkers.

FALL RIVER UNABLE TO HIRE MEN AT $4 A DAY

Fall River, Nov. 16—Relief work, authorized by the Board of Aldermen some weeks ago, when $60,000 was raised by loan for the purpose of relieving the unemployment situation in this city, has been closed down for the reason there had been practically no response from workmen at the scale of $4 per day. No further attempt will be made to start up the work until next spring.

MURPHY DECRIES DEBATE WITH CURLEY

Says Offer Shows Weakness and Flays Latter as Hypocrite With Poor

John R. Murphy laid at the door of former Mayor James M. Curley the charge of harsh and brutal treatment to city employes and the city's poor.

Mr. Murphy sent the following letter to Mr. Curley, declining the latter's invitation to a joint debate:

CHARGES HYPOCRISY.

"Mr. James M. Curley,
"No. 350 Jamaica Way,
"Boston, Mass.

"Dear Sir:

"I have received a letter from you dated November the 14th, 1921. You make therein the following statements:

"That you sympathize with the poor and that food, shelter and clothing are what are wanted by the people at the present time.

"That as chairman of the Finance Commission, I submitted no reports derogatory to the usefulness of Public Celebrations, John Grady.

"That you invite me to discuss the real issues of the campaign in joint debate at Roughan Hall, Charlestown, on Thursday next.

"And that I present such facts as I may see fit with reference to the Boston Fire Department.

"Your pretended sympathy for the poor is not substantiated by your acts while Mayor of Boston. By your deeds, ye shall be judged.

"Under your treatment of the city employes, many poor men and women did not know from day to day how long they would be allowed by you to earn the support of themselves and children. In all the history of Boston there never has been a man Mayor of Boston who treated the humble city employes with such heartlessness and such bitter disregard of the poor.

SAYS INMATE WAS SUICIDE.

"Your drastic and unwarranted reductions of wages and dismissals from service of faithful city employes from the daily checked only by the brave defiance made to you by the late Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara and subsequently by Brigadier-General Charles H. Cole, who resigned as an Commissioner rather than obey your demands for wholesale wage cuts.

"As a further example of your disregard of the cry of the poor you, when Mayor, allowed conditions to exist in both Long Island and Deer Island which were, to say the least, inhuman and which caused one inmate, in a desperate protest against the food being served them, to dive headlong from a balcony to his death.

WEAKNESS IN DEBATE.

"The Finance Commission, on its appropriation of $35,000, covered a multitude of sins with the errors that need investigation. This was emphatically so under your administration. You will recall your connection with the contracts of the high-pressure fire service, where the city's money was wasted. Typical, that magical preparation which would preserve wood, stone and any old thing; and the bonding investigation.

"All of these investigations and many others, directly your administration too numerous to mention, were directed against situations of an inferior nature and in no instance the results were referred to the District Attorney of Suffolk County for action on his part.

"Your invitation to debate is a confession of weakness on your part and it is needless to say I will not accept it. I propose to have you make your defense your own way. At the opportune time I will continue to supply all further information for the public benefit regarding the fire apparatus which you purchased and not Commissioner Grady, who was obeying your orders.

SUGGESTS "GANG" STAY AWAY.

"Permit me to make the suggestion to you that in coming to Charlestown you have your followers believe that in Charlestown, do not take kindly to the class of men that you bring with you to speak in this campaign. The people of Charlestown will listen to you and will decide for themselves without the stimulus of enthusiasm manufactured by professional claquers brought from other parts of the city.

(Signed) "John R. Murphy."

Murphy Plans Series of "Heart-to-Heart" Talks

John R. Murphy tonight begins a series of "heart-to-heart" talks with his campaign workers, and will continue every night until election. He will meet delegations from all parts of the city at his campaign headquarters, No. 116 Tremont street, and will discuss with them the issues and the developments of the campaign, before departure for his night rallies. He asks at least 5 workers from Dorchester will meet him tonight.

Daniel C. Quirk, former member of the Governor's Council, will be in charge of the speakers' bureau throughout the campaign.

Murphy will address the Boston League of Women Voters tonight at No. 16 Boylston street at 8 o'clock, he will address the Taxpayers' League of Dorchester at Dorchester High School and at 9 o'clock at a house party in the home of James Hennessey, No. 51 Speedwell street, Dorchester.

10 PER CENT. WAGE CUT PENDING ON B. & A.

Notification of a pending wage reduction of 10 per cent. has been sent out to employes by the Boston & Albany Railroad. Similar notice is being taken by practically every railroad in the country, according to dispatches received here. Notification, railway officials say, is merely a matter of form, and does not mean that a wage slash is imminent. Representatives of the labor organizations will meet with company officials inside of thirty days to discuss the proposition. Upon the refusal of the men to agree to the proposed cut, the matter will be referred to the U. S. Railway Labor Board in Chicago.

British Propaganda

Harvard Professor Advocates Most Unpatriotic Pro-Rata Reduction of Naval Armaments

The British propaganda in this country to induce us to repudiate our avowed object to free the seas, bwells until its echoes are heard in all directions.

The latest and most brazen echo is from Harvard University. Harvard has long suffered from more than its share of British toadies. One, M. O. Hudson, a Professor at Harvard, spoke at the Twentieth Century Club on Armistice Day. He prostituted the occasion and himself to most unpatriotic British propaganda. It is always hard when an American professor becomes a British toady to know whether he is conscious of his lack of patriotism or whether his desire to "show class" blinds him to the character of his conduct. At any rate this gentleman advocated a pro-rata reduction in the navies of the United States, Japan and Great Britain. The man redeemed himself a little by frankly acknowledging the consequences of his proposal in these words, "and if Great Britain continues to use her sea power as she has in the past, I see no reason to dispute her title to be mistress' of the sea." That is a frank acknowledgment of the consequence of the British scheme for a pro-rata disarmament.

This conscious or unconscious British propagandist at Harvard must have disconcerted the British authorities, for the proposal that America consent to a pro-rata reduction of the American, Japanese and English navies means only one thing. It is a proposal to make America helpless on the sea, to abandon our policy of achieving the freedom of the seas and to acknowledge forever the RIGHT, which we have never before acknowledged, of Great Britain to be mistress of the sea. There never was proposed to an independent and intelligent people any such insulting, degrading and dangerous scheme in the history of nations. Great Britain with all her brazenness and impertinence never has been willing to put it quite so baldly as this Harvard propagandist.

This gentleman from Harvard and indeed the entire British band of propagandists assume that the American people are totally ignorant of Great Britain's history and are quite in the dark concerning the fact that Great Britain has used her power on the sea to oppress every nation in the world and to bring shame and degradation and poverty and famine to at least one-quarter of the human race. Now these are facts known to every honest student of history. No nation in the annals of man has ever abused a sea power as Great Britain has abused hers. She is no more fit to control the sea than the orang-outang of the Rue Morgue was fit to be entrusted with a razor. While human nature remains unchanged no nation ought to trust another nation with power over itself.

This proposal for a pro-rata reduction of navies means that Great Britain will continue to have a navy twice as strong as ours and three times as strong when added to it is the naval power of her ally, Japan. The scheme means the prolongation of armaments, not their reduction. It means a standing incitement to war.

But on the other hand patriotic and intelligent American statesmanship should say to Great Britain:

We want not only to reduce armaments, but we want to reduce the incitement to war, which too much military power constantly produces. We want you to abandon the idea that you have any right to control the seas. We never control the seas if we choose, because we have the superior resources. We will not take advantage of our power to wrest the control of the seas away from you unless you insist upon attempting to continue to control the seas. In that case we will build against you until we have bankrupted you and you are willing to abandon your armaments in very espoir.

If we say that to the British statesmen, and mean it, they will agree in advance to reduce their armaments until they have no longer a navy which can control the sea. This will end militarism on the sea. Then there will be no militarism left except that of the French armies and Japan's army and navy. The French army can never be dangerous, for no nation with a diminishing population is ever permanently dangerous, and the French people are not militaristic.

The white world could easily handle Japan and do her no injustice.

The militaristic danger to a world seeking peace is the British claim to control the sea—the world's great highway, which binds the nations in amity by peaceful commerce.

Watching the Family Row

President De Valera and Associates Have Unique and Delightful Position on Sidelines at the Ulster Performance

It must be a unique and delightful sensation for President De Valera, Mr. Griffith, Mr. Collins and their associates representing the people of Ireland to be able to sit in a quiet box on the sidelines and watch the English government and the noisy but insignificant minority in Ulster having a family row.

The situation reminds one of the spectacle of a big brother, whose patience has been thoroughly exhausted by the unreasonable exactions and termagancy of an irritable, self-centred, sharp-tongued little sister, telling his unreasonable relative that she must abandon her prima donna temperament and agree to get along with her people.

The process of persuasion in such cases is usually a bit stormy and weepy. So we imagine it is in the case of Ulster. President De Valera, Mr. Collins and Mr. Griffith and their colleagues must look on with some amusement while England is trying to put sense into the head of Ulster.

Soldiers' Thanksgiving

Disabled Veterans in the Hospitals Should Be Given a Pleasant Holiday Outing

Last year the Boston American suggested that it would be very nice for those who could afford to do so to take the disabled soldiers from their hospitals to their homes or to some hotel to give them a Thanksgiving outing.

The suggestion took hold of a great many people and many disabled soldiers were given a pleasant Thanksgiving.

We renew the suggestion this year. It is true that at the hospital where they are passing their time entertainment is provided, but the best recreation is the change of surroundings, change of faces, a feeling that the people outside are interested in them and appreciate the character of the service which they rendered when they suffered their loss.

WAR IS FOLDING UP ITS BANNERS

With It Will Go Part of the Pageant of Life, Something Terrible but Majestic, Hideous but Dramatic, Unthinkable in This Era of Civilization

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Written Expressly for Universal Service. Copyright, 1921, by Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Whatever the extreme pacifists may believe, we have not yet entirely done with war. But eventually we shall have done with it. Call it economically too expensive, call it a growth of the humane instinct, call it increasing religious conviction, call it world extermination if it continues, the fact remains that war is gradually folding up its banners and preparing to depart.

And with war will go something that is a part of the great pageant of life as we see it, something terrible but spectacularly majestic, hideous but dramatic, ugly but impressive. Unthinkable as it is in this era of civilization, it has been the ladder by which men have risen to heights of sacrifice and heroism they would not otherwise have dared.

Battleship to Vanish

But war will go. The battleship will vanish from our seas, and the soldier from the land. The vast impediments of war, the guns and swords, the rattle of artillery, the thud of cavalry, the line on line of marching men, will go. The crowds on the pavements, stricken and yet uplifted, will go about their peaceful business, and there will be no more war.

Not yet. Perhaps not for a very long time. But war is dying, and let us deal generously with it, now that we may. It has taken more than it could ever give, and it goes to a dishonored grave. But some things it did give.

Not only color and drama, although it gave us those. The appeal of the fighting man is imbedded in us from the beginning of the race. Our very old sentiment Christianity is militant. Long before law came gradually to disestablish him, the fighting man stood for human rights. But for right by might. And because his was a sordid business at best, from the beginning he has disguised it in a picturesque magnificence. His lance has gleamed, his coat of mail has shone. And thus accoutered, he hid his ugly business behind high-sounding words, colorful as himself. He built up a code which was unmoral yet somehow appealing, and called it chivalry, and he exalted physical courage to romantic heights.

His ideals were often right, but his methods were wrong. So he must go, but let us acknowledge that he has served a not unworthy purpose. He gave misery, but he was a part of the great pageant of the world, colorful and heroic, and very often great.

War is hateful. Its origins have too often lain in selfishness and greed. But we can now afford to bow our heads as it passes on, and acknowledge that if it has killed, it has also given men a chance to rise superior to it. Out of its very horrors have come patriotism, sacrifice and courage. Through it men have died for an ideal, and thus have made that ideal imperishable.

It is only by war that we have now come to peace.

The whole question of nationalism revolves around this matter of war. Men have united, formed arbitrary boundaries, and have called the land and people within those boundaries a nation. They have united for protection against an inimical world and when threatened they have risen as one man to defend that nation. This impulse is patriotism.

It is unthinkable that patriotism should die, yet it is perfectly true that we are only driven out of ourselves nationally by some great danger, such as war. We do not know how much we love our country until it is threatened. It is a tragic fact that war unites a nation as does nothing else. For war, then, which we can no longer endure, we must find something else. And what shall that thing be? A vast internationalism, perhaps, in time. An ethical instead of a bloody responsibility to our fellows.

But war or not so much war as the visible evidences of it, the navy, the army, even the flag which we have made a military emblem, have up to this time symbolized us to ourselves.

No Easy Job

In the absence of other tangible evidences of our nationality, our battleships and soldiers are symbols of our country. That vast, intangible thing which otherwise we cannot visualize, the nation, becomes tangible, sails the sea as battleships, marches the streets in our uniforms, becomes to us the concrete evidence, not so much of war as of nationality.

To put the world on a peace-thinking basis is not easy. We have thought too long in terms of force. Perhaps, when the magnificent folly that is war has long been dead, we shall forget the magnificence and remember only the folly. But now that war is dying, let us pay it the tribute of such virtues as it had. We may say of it:

"Here lies war. It killed wantonly and wickedly. It has left grief and wretchedness behind it. But during its life it taught nations patriotism, and it led some men to God."

ARE YOU A "KNOCKER"?

Some parents have a habit of belittling their children or some members of their family in the eyes of those outside.

There is no more despicable habit.

What good can it do to set people up against your own?

It cannot possibly make you out any smarter or better or more refined or more successful to make biting and slurring remarks which hurt the reputation of those who should be as dear as they are near.

It never raised one man a peg or put down another.

And when it comes to your own flesh and blood you are not helping your child to get a start in the world when you complain constantly of its misdeeds.

And perhaps the things you are so bitter about are not misdeeds, but just whims, as you are whimsical in wanting things different, and as often as not the thing complained of is too much like the one who detests it.

Be just first, and justice should prompt you to start Tom and Mary off with as many friends as possible, and a little propaganda of how wonderfully thoughtful and earnest your offspring can be does much to make them want to live up to the reputation Dad and Mother have given them.

WOULD SELL HERSELF TO GO TO COLLEGE

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

SHE'S for sale, Pretty Girl, and she just twenty, and all she asks is $3,000 and a wedding ring.

Is she cheap at the price or is she dear?

She lives in a Middle-Western city, and her name is—let's call her Pretty Girl.

Pretty Girl wants to write books, oh, libraries full of books! Lovely books, novels and stories and romances and maybe poems—she isn't quite sure about that.

But to do all these things she must have an education, and to have an education she must have money and the only way she can get money is to sell herself to a husband—a nice, generous, good-natured husband, who is willing to give her $3,000 on her wedding day, and say:

"There, there, child—take your books and run along and get educated."

What the husband is going to get out of the bargain Pretty Girl doesn't say. Perhaps she doesn't even think. Some persons are like that, when it comes to husbands.

What Does Husband Get?

I wonder if some one will buy her.

Why should they, do you suppose? There are so many women who don't want any education at all or any money, much. All they want is a husband and maybe a home. Yes, I'm afraid Pretty Girl has set her price a little high.

And then all that fuss about an education. I wonder how many really great writers have been to college?

Somehow, they never seem to think about college at all, the geniuses.

They go or they don't go—just as it happens. And it doesn't seem to matter much which—and then all at once, pop, splash—there they are with a book all written and published, and maybe they haven't even an English grammar to their names.

Odd, isn't it? Did you ever stop to think, Pretty Girl, that if all you needed in order to be able to write a book was a college education, every one who goes to college could write 'em right off the reel—just like that, as soon as they'd been a freshman and a sophomore and a junior and a senior?

Where Books Come From

Where do you think books come from, anyhow, little girl? Out of other books?

They come out of your own brain and your own heart and your own life—and not all the colleges in the world will put a book into your head unless it's there anyhow.

And, then, don't you know that hundreds of poor girls work their way through college every year, Pretty Girl?

Well, they do. They make beds and wait on table or sew for the other girls, or dress hair or do manicuring, or coach stupid students and get through beautifully, and everybody respects and admires them for their courage and their industry. Besides, there's a perfectly good university in your State—it costs very little to go through that—nothing much but your board and a few extras. Isn't there some family down in the college town that would be tickled to death to get you to help out at home, and let you go to college?

Mexican Army Out of Politics

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 16.—Army officers who refuse to obey the order of General Enrique Estrada, Secretary of War, to keep out of politics will be dismissed from the service, according to announcement from the War Department.

A study of political conditions throughout Mexico has been made and a list has been prepared of officers who have been mixing in politics. These are to lose their commissions if they persist in giving their support to aspirants to office.

This warning will probably draw nearly all of the offending officers from the political contests, as commissions are not easy to get as they were a year or two ago. Many officers have been retired to civil life and others are to follow and there are few who wish to give up military life and the consideration it gives with the government pay roll.

Privates who meddle in politics will also be discharged from the army.

It is believed that withdrawal of military men from all part in political contests will have a far-reaching good effect. In the past one of the chief causes of complaint was that soldiers could be moved about in such a way as to decide elections.

THAT AWFUL STATE, 'TOO STUPID AND TOO LAZY'

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

It is an awful state to reach wherein you are too lazy to work and too stupid to play!

Perhaps you did not realize that you were tending in that direction —You—meaning We in this western world.

Once upon a time, when biblical teachings and their implications governed our thought more authoritatively, we used to believe ourselves under the need of earning our bread by the sweat of our brow.

That was merely the pious equivalent for recognizing the obvious fact that man must work in order to eat and live—an idea which the Bolsheviki seem to have re-discovered!

Duly, we appear to have made a virtue of that necessity, and to have learned that work is good for us—keeps body well, mind alert, and spirit sweet.

With the sanity and balance born of human experience, we know that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy. In other words, the complete picture of life requires, for light and shade, alternate spells of toil and rest.

All Play, No Work

By the same token, we have learned that all play and no work tends to make Jack a degenerate.

We do not envy the glorified loafer, for he is endlessly bored with having too much of his own company, too much leisure to think —with too little ability to think!

When all the year is a holiday, it becomes as tedious to sport as it is for the sabbathless to drudge.

We thought we had reached the heart of the problem and the golden mean of practical wisdom when we cut the day's pie into three equal parts, eight hours for work, eight hours for sleep, and eight for food and recreation.

But men grow lazier and lazier, or let us say they become increasingly reluctant to work—and more and more ambitious to loafe.

Or shall we say that the tendency of the mass of men is to want more leisure in order that they may have time for more self-culture? Is that your case?

Well, it is a complicated situation with many co-operating and conflicting factors. To all of which, it befits You, as a thinking member of a self-directing democracy, to give serious consideration.

First of all, please realize that the problem is Yours and not the theoretical plaything of publicists, or the practical football of political labor leaders and of "working" politicians!

Life is not a game which you can get out of or keep out of, or out of which you are to get more than you invest. Life is real and earnest and, if it is a game at all, it must be played squarely and by all!

Your case not like the phrase, the joy of working, and you may believe it was invented by some satanic taskmaster; but you would be wiser to accept and to face again, as an individual conviction, Man's necessity to work!

Happier Far

And you will be happier far, if also you discover for yourself, the practical wisdom of making a virtue of every necessity; so that, for instance, since you must work, you will learn to get joy out of your work by putting joy into your work.

Refusing the lure of loafing and laziness, which "leaders" who do not "like" may hold out to you of decreasing hours of toil accompanied by an increasing wage, you might better recapture for yourself the worker's former self-respect by giving an honest day's happy toil, which you then have the right to expect will be requited by just material reward.

Complicating factors in society's problem of the proper balancing of work and play and part of the labor-saving machinery and the organization of industry, which make it possible for us to produce in a two-hour working day all that America needs!

To keep us employed for eight hours, we extend our commerces, compete for foreign markets, and educate human beings the world over to want what they do not need.

That makes business, millionaires —and more problems!

Again, since the tendency is to shorter hours of toil and you are a self-directing citizen, you will have to hold yourself to a stricter accounting for the use of your leisure!

If it is your choice, no one can prevent your jazzing your life away. That is, no one but Yourself!

Movies are good, and dancing is good and pleasure in general is good. But man is more than a mere key, and self-respect will not allow you to dissipate all your playtime.

You dare not become too lazy to work, and you would be foolish to get no lasting good out of your leisure.

Work hard and generously and well. Put pride and joy into your efforts. Then your play will be wiser and sweeter, too!
